Montgomery Counsel Held As Embezzler, Resigns Post

Peter Quits Job, Then Posts Bond on Charge of $2,000 Fraud.

Hearing in Court Is Set for Friday

Irregularity in Handling County Funds Laid to Fusion Leader.

Edward Peter, 31-year-old attorney, who, as a leader of the Fusion party in Montgomery County, led a successful revolt against the regular Democratic organization in 1934, was arrested yesterday on a warrant charging him with embezzling $2,000 in county funds.

Immediately before he surrendered in the Rockville courthouse, Peter resigned as counsel for the Board of Montgomery County Commissioners—a post to which he was appointed after the Fusionists elected a majority of the board.

Peter, member of a family rooted in Maryland since colonial days, also turned over to Ira C. Whitacre, clerk to the county commissioners, a check for $15,941.05. This, it was explained, covered all sums which he had ordered drawn for adjustment of taxes and the like.

A short time after his arrest Peter was released on $10,000 bond and ordered to appear for a hearing in police court Friday.

Excitement in Town.

For a week or more, there had been an air of excitement in Rockville. On Thursday the county commissioners, in a secret session, told Peter to make an accounting.

Yesterday afternoon State's Attorney James H. Pugh went before Justice of the Peace Charles M. Webb and obtained a warrant for Peter's arrest. This charged that on December 18, 1935, Peter, in obtaining a voucher for $2,000 to make an adjustment in the taxes of the Washington Railway & Electric Co., "fraudulently and feloniously" embezzled the money and "appropriated it to his own use."

Told about the warrant, Peter called at the office of State's Attorney Pugh. With him was his brother, Vinson Peter, and his uncle, Dr. R. W. Vinson, Rockville druggist.

The warrant was served on Peter by Detective Sergt. Theodore Vollten.

After the bond papers were brought in by Harry M. Williams, clerk of the Montgomery County Police Court, Dr. Vinson put up $10,000 in real estate bonds to release his nephew.

Uncle Offers Bond.

State's Attorney Pugh would not comment on the case beyond saying that it would be handled just like any other case.

Alexander K. Hancock, county auditor, explained that Peter had drawn a number of vouchers without first having obtained the approval of the county commissioners.

The procedure should have been, Hancock said, for Peter to have presented a request for money in a tax adjustment case to the commissioners, who then would have voted a formal order for the money.

This order, he said, would go to the auditor's office, where a voucher directing the county treasurer to pay the money would be prepared. Theoretically, the voucher should be signed by Whitacre, clerk to the county commissioners. The practice has been, however, for an employe of the auditor's office to rubber-stamp Whitacre's name to the document.

The warrant on which Peter was arrested yesterday was based on a voucher which he ordered made out December 18, 1935, calling for the payment of $2,000 out of the contingent fund to the Washington Railway & Electric Co., for an adjustment in taxes.

This adjustment grew out of the railway company's abandonment of its line from Washington to Rockville.

The $2,000 voucher was made out for Peter by Wilson Stewart, a veteran clerk in the auditor's office, who, following practice, stamped Whitacre's name to it.

After Peter got the voucher, Stewart prepared a memorandum of the transaction and passed it on to a young woman in the office assigned to audit vouchers. She noticed that it had not been ordered by the County Commissioners, and

Federal Agents Capture Bentz In N. Y. Hideout

Bank Bandit Surrenders Under a Barrage of Tear Gas.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 13.—Edward Bentz, whom Federal agents charge with participation in 40 bank robberies with a total loot running into millions of dollars, was seized today—cowering in a dumbwaiter shaft, clad only in his underwear.

Government operatives surrounded the apartment building in Brooklyn, where he was captured, and filled the lower floor with tear-gas bombs. With drawn guns, they advanced into the building to meet the man they have hunted for more than a year as one of the most notorious bandits in the country.

"Don't shoot, boys, I'll come right out," a voice said and following it the agents came upon Bentz jammed in the dumbwaiter shaft where he had tried to flee.

Agents Find Arsenal.

"Well," he said, "you boys have been looking for me a long time, I guess."

Rummagnig in the room, the agents found two machine guns, a rifle, four automatic pistols, a bullet-proof vest and hundreds of rounds of ammunition.

At police headquarters they agreed with the prisoner that they had been looking for him a long time. They exhibited his record, which includes a dozen arrests for various charges, and allegations that he took part in two-score bank robberies.

Among those with which he is charged were:

First National Bank, Milford, Pa., December, 1935; $15,000.

After his arrest he was booked on bank robbery charges as Edward Wilhelm Bentz.

Government agents said Vermont authorities probably would be given the first opportunity to have him extradited there under the Danville charge.

Said to have been an associate of Harvey Bailey, notorious bandit, now serving a life sentence at Alcatraz, Bentz has been mentioned in connection with the Weyerhaeuser kidnaping case in Takoma, Wash., last spring.

Agents said they also would question him about the $2,000,000 robbery of a Lincoln (Nebr.) bank in 1930.

The arresting agents also found a man, a woman and three young children in the apartment from which Bentz fled.

The adults were taken to headquarters. The children were cared for by neighbors, who also harbored other families driven from the building by the clouds of tear gas filtering from floor to floor.

U. S., Canada Flood Toll 29; $5,334,000 Is Granted for Aid

Cold Weather Increases Misery of Homeless Hundreds; Damage Will Total Millions; Roosevelt Authorizes Federal Help.

By the Associated Press.

Roaring floodwaters, which caused at least 29 deaths, swept over sections of the northeastern United States and eastern Canada last night, causing uncalculated damage and leaving hundreds homeless.

The end of the second day of flood destruction found 13 persons dead in eastern Canada and 16 in the United States. Damage was expected to total many millions.

Cold weather, while it served to slacken the floods, brought added misery to the homeless.

President Roosevelt authorized the expenditure of $5,334,000 of work relief funds to combat the emergency and officials hastened to alleviate suffering with Federal funds wherever possible.

Transportation and communication lines were broken or crippled in many New England sections and in the Middle Atlantic States when ice jams broke and released penned-up waters of normally placid streams.

Coast Guard planes and boats, their crews already wearied by two days of fighting floods, awaited threatened breaking of the banks of five of the Northeast's greatest rivers—the Merrimac and Connecticut in New England, the Passaic in New Jersey, the Hudson in New York and the Susquehanna in Pennsylvania.

Eastern Canada reported 13 deaths. Eight were reported in New England, four in Pennsylvania, and one each in New York and New Jersey.

Offutt Denies Capital Traffic Ticket 'Fixing'

Advisory Council Head Says 'Evil' Does Not Exist; Roberts Is Witness.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Contrary to recent charges that ticket "fixing" by members of Congress, Government officials and influential citizens, is a serious evil in Washington, George W. Offutt, chairman of the Traffic Advisory Council, told the House traffic subcommittee yesterday that "no such conditions exist here."

"You can hear all kinds of rumors, but I couldn't give you a single instance, where traffic tickets have been 'fixed' in the true meaning of the word," said Offutt, replying to a question by Representative Carpenter (Democrat), Kansas, chairman of the subcommittee.

Efforts to learn of such practices, Offutt continued, have been futile.

"The advisory council has looked into the subject to some extent, but we have not been deeply concerned because the practice has in no way been regarded as an evil. I am strongly in favor of leniency in certain cases and I don't think it comes under the head of 'fixing.'" Offutt said.

Carpenter raised the question of alleged discrimination after referring to testimony of Col. L. C. Crawford, of the Board of Trade

6,000 Expected Back at Jobs In N. Y. Strike

Arbitration Agreement Is Signed; Peace Believed Near in Tie-up.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 13.—Peace in the 13-day-old building service strike appeared nearer tonight than at any time since the walkout began.

Managements of 600 buildings, represented by the Metropolitan Building Owners Association, late today signed an arbitration agreement with the union under which approximately 6,000 men are expected to return to work tomorrow.

A few minutes later the Realty Advisory Board, the strike's strongest opponent, made a new plea for settlement, admitting that 85 per cent of its "replacement" workers were "men who would not be satisfactory under ordinary circumstances" and offering to dismiss them.

The other 15 per cent, said William D. Rawlins, executive secretary of the board, have been promised permanent employment.

The Metropolitan agreement was the second big break in the owners' ranks since the strike began and came at a time when the Realty Advisory Board was endeavoring to win strikers away from the union and back to their jobs as individuals.

Last Friday the Prudence Co., Inc., owning 45 office buildings valued at $15,000,000, signed a separate agreement with the union, granted an $8 monthly wage increase and a "preferential" shop.

The Advisory Board said its offer to strikers had been successful and that "hundreds of strikers asked for

Husband Divorced; Put Salt Into Bed

With the observation that he had never "heard anything like this before," Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat, in the District Supreme Court, yesterday awarded Mrs. Edith V. Allen a limited divorce because, among other allegations, her husband sprinkled salt in her bed.

In addition, there were 11 charges that Allen had kicked his wife out of bed and that he had burned her on the neck with a lighted cigaret, had thrown gin in her face and on another occasion had wadded up his pajamas and had beaten her with them.

Attorney Jean M. Boardman, representing Mrs. Allen, said there were other charges of inhumane treatment which led Mrs. Allen to ask for the decree. He explained the husband had thrown the salt into the bed in a fit of exasperation.

WPA Strikers Besiege Capitol; Gov. La Follette Will Aid Fight

By the Associated Press.

Madison, Wis., March 13.—Intent on extending their occupation of the capitol at least another night, 100 WPA strikers made arrangements to while away evening hours with a mock session of the Legislature.

The band, which marched here yesterday demanding to see Gov. Philip La Follette in their campaign for higher wages and better working conditions, encamped all day in the assembly chamber and depended on a food committee appointed from their number to round up provisions.

A committee representing the strikers conferred with Gov. La Follette for half an hour tonight, but the Governor told them the State was unable to raise funds to meet their requests for increased pay. He said only the Federal Government could boost the wage scale.

The committee proposed that $500,000 additional funds allotted to Wisconsin yesterday be used to increase pay rather than to prolong the work.

"We would rather starve all at once than slowly," one member said.

La Follette promised to confer with State WPA authorities about the matter.

The strikers passed the day trying out the piano in the representatives room, playing cards and adopting resolutions.

One ordered a picketing committee to the office of M. W. Torkelson, WPA administrator.

Some Madison grocers came to their aid also with promises of bread and pastries, he added.

The strikers, some of whom traveled 150 miles, come from Sheboygan and other Fox River Valley cities. Their trip was undertaken, Lyle Olson, their chairman said, because Gov. La Follette, in his last campaign, "told us to come to Madison if we don't get what we want."

House Backs Corporations' 'Cushion' Tax

Graduated Scale Is Set to Provide Required 620 Millions.

By Robert C. Albright.

Modifying corporation earnings tax recommendations of the Administration, a House Ways and Means sub-committee yesterday wrote the "cushion" principle of lowered rates on small corporate surpluses into its tentative tax bill.

The sub-committee agreed to a graduated schedule of rates ranging from a 15 per cent tax on the first 10 per cent of current undistributed earnings, to a 55 per cent levy on all earnings retained in excess of 30 per cent.

Representative Samuel B. Hill, of Washington, chairman of the group, said the schedule would raise the full $620,000,000 additional revenue sought by the President from corporate income.

Although still making large inroads on company earnings, and imposing a normal income tax on dividend income for the first time, the plan is less drastic than the original brackets proposed by the Treasury.

Treasury Rates Higher.

The proposed Treasury rates were based on amounts of income retained by corporations, rather than percentages, and ranged from a 20 per cent tax on the first $2,000 earnings to a 37½ per cent levy on corporate income in excess of $40,000.

Sub-committee members claimed revenue losses from modifying tax rates in the lower income groups would be entirely recouped by stiffening the rates on the higher brackets. They insisted tha. corporations reporting small earnings would actually pay less taxes under the plan than under the present tax maximum of 16½ per cent resulting from corporate income, excess profits and capital stock levies to be repealed by the new law.

The "cushion" plan was originally sponsored in the House by Representative Fred M. Vinson (Democrat), Kentucky, and for a fortnight has been the center of a duel of tables and statistics between Treasury experts and sub-committee members.

To Encourage Reserves.

The stated object of the plan is to enable corporations to convert some percentage of earnings into reserves each year, as a safeguard against emergencies, without paying excessive tax penalties. Vinson declared the plan agreed to yesterday will do this. Representative business interests have yet to be heard from.

Chairman Hill explained yesterday that the action of the group is tentative in the sense that all subcommittee action is tentative. Asked if the Treasury still opposed the "cushion" principle, Hill said:

"Our committee is writing the bill."

On the undistributed net income so far as same constitutes: Not more than 10 per cent of the total net income, 15 per cent. More than 10 per cent and not more than 20 per cent, 30 per cent. More than 20 per cent and not more than 30 per cent, 45 per cent. More than 30 per cent of the total net ncome, 55 per cent.

Plan Workings Shown.

The sub-committee at the same time made public a comparative table showing how the new tax rates on only that percentage of earnings retained, would work out if computed in terms of total earnings, on which taxes now are levid.

If a corporation, for example, paid out all of its dividends to shareholders, it would pay NO tax under th new plan, although the shareholders themselves would have to pay taxes on dividends received.

If the other extreme was used as an example, and a corporation failed to distribute any of its earnings as dividends, the tax it would pay, expressed as percentage of total net income, would be 47½ per cent the table showed.

If only 10 per cent of its earnings were retained as reserves, the percentage of its total earnings it would pay in tax, would be 1½ per cent, and if 20 per cent of income was withheld from stockholders, the cor-

32-Lbs. Reducing Fails to Win Job

Albany, N. Y., March 13 (AP).—Miss Rose Freistater took off 32 pounds in an effort to get back her teaching job, but it was no use.

Dr. Frank P. Graves, State commissioner of education, dismissed today the young woman's appeal from a ruling of the New York City board of education denying her a teacher's license because she was overweight.

Miss Freistater was rejected by the New York City board in 1931 when her weight registered 182 pounds. The board of examiners allowed her six months in which to reduce to 150 pounds, but at the end of that period she weighed 160. A further extension of time was refused.

She appealed to the State education department last May and embarked on a strenuous reducing course.

Last December she renewed her appeal to the education department, claiming she had finally achieved the 150-pound limit demanded by the New York City board. But it was all in vain.

Compromise on Rhine Reported French Aim If Britain Pledges Aid

Hitler Cancels Speaking Tour, Hurries to Berlin Conference

New German Move Indicated in Sudden Decision; Reich Believed Alarmed Over Threat of Economic Sanctions.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 13.—Adolf Hitler, unexpectedly cutting short a speaking tour, hurried back to Berlin for conferences tonight, indicating a new move in the Rhineland crisis may be at hand.

Earlier, there was a report that the remaining members of the Locarno Treaty, meeting in London, planned to send him a final appeal to withdraw troops from the Rineland—an appeal which would be almost an ultimatum.

Nazi officials said, however, no new note from London had arrived. Der Fuehrer was closeted with members of the cabinet and party leaders.

Following a speech last night in the Rhineland, he had been scheduled to speak in Munich tomorrow night.

The Deutsche Diplomatische Korrespondenz, mouthpiece of the German foreign office, disclosed today that Germany will build fortifications at strategic points in the Rhineland.

"Pillbox" fortifications will be placed along the western frontier, the publication stated in giving the first official confirmation of action, which had been generally expected in Germany.

Unlike the French system of fortifications, the Deutsche Diplomatische Korrespondenz said, the German front-line facing France will be small and disconnected.

"Germany cannot afford to spend 8,000,000,000 francs, as France has," the foreign office organ stated.

A concentric Nazi press attack upon sanctions indicated tonight the German people are becoming alarmed over the possibility of economic measures against them by Locarno powers and the League of Nations for remilitarization of the Rhine.

In accordance with instructions, apparently from persons "higher up," newspapers told the public sanctions are "a gun that goes off at both ends."

Editorials from French, Polish, Belgian, Bulgarian, Czechoslovak, Rumania, Dutch, Norwegian and British papers were quoted to show

'Gesture' Predicated on Sanctions Support if Hitler Balks Plan.

Germany Believed Ready for Parley

England Wins Promise of Delay in the League Council Action.

By the United Press.

London (Saturday), March 14.—France informed Great Britain early today that she will compromise with Germany in the Rhineland crisis, sources close to the foreign office said.

However, France's price for this gesture, it was said, is Britain's pledge to participate in financial and economic sanctions against Germany in case Chancellor Hitler rejects the compromise plan.

According to a second, less-favored project, France might agree to renounce sanctions provided Great Britain will make new guarantees of French security, tantamount to a Franco-British military alliance.

During yesterday's meeting of the Locarno signatories, Britain voiced firm opposition to punitive fiscal and commercial measures against Germany.

Meanwhile, a slight relaxation in European tension was noticeable today as statesmen prepared for the meeting of the League of Nations Council here.

Germany, although withholding any fresh offer of concessions, is believed to be ready to meet the proposed British compromise at least half way.

Britain Wins Delay.

London, March 13 (AP).—The British government, fighting for time to allow Adolf Hitler a final opportunity to reconsider, succeeded tonight in delaying action on his remilitarization of the Rhineland for at least several days.

The four remaining Locarno Treaty powers, after a day-long discussion, agreed to make tomorrow's meeting of the League of Nations Council here a mere dress rehearsal to hear the French and Belgians state their complaint against Germany's violation of the treaty.

The Council then will adjourn over the week-end while Britain, France, Italy and Belgium return to a consideration of recommendations they will make to the Council, and also await word from Hitler as to whether a conciliatory gesture by him is forthcoming.

The Rhineland problem will pass officially from the hands of the Locarno powers tomorrow and be merged into a general international problem when the Council of the League of Nations meets here to take up Franco-Belgian appeals against Germany's scrapping of the Locarno Pact.

The day's biggest developments were:

1. A high authority stated that Italy flatly refused to join a movement to impose sanctions against Germany.

2. The British Foreign Office announced: "The door is still open for Germany to make any kind of an offer it wishes."

3. Soviet Russia pledged France its backing, both military and economic, for punishment of Germany with sanctions.

4. Dr. Leopold von Hoesch, the German Ambassador to London, went to the British Foreign Office to confer with legal experts on what were smilingly described as "minor matters."

War Fears Lessen.

League officials expressed unofficially the view that a solution of the crisis would eventually be found without an outbreak of hostilities, but admitted it would in no wise curb Europe's present tendency to arm to the teeth.

The Council's plan for tomorrow is for the French and Belgian spokesmen, Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin and Premier Paul Van Zeeland, to state their cases on the Rhineland violation of Locarno.

Then the Council plans to adjourn until Monday to gain time for reflection and further negotiations, perhaps to give time for a new peace contribution from Hitler.

Locarno powers will meet again tomorrow for a further consolidation of their views. They formally agreed yesterday that Germany had violated both the Locarno and Versailles treaties.

League officials expressed belief the passing of the problem from Locarno to League hands will have a somewhat calming effect on the

U. S. Bureau Slashes Fund From $608,000; Action Affects 30,262.

The District relief program was thrown into confusion yesterday when the Federal Budget Bureau slashed to $250,000 the supplemental appropriation requested by the Board of Public Welfare and the District Commissioners to carry relief through the remainder of the fiscal year.

The Board of Public Welfare and the Commissioners had requested $608,000 as the minimum with which they could carry on the relief program.

Confronted by the unofficial but authoritative reports of the action of Daniel W. Bell, head of the Budget Bureau, the welfare board is to meet with Commissioner George E. Allen at 2 p. m. Monday to consider what must be done.

Officials are confronted, it was said, by two major alternatives. There were on direct relief rolls 9,102 cases, involving 30,262 persons on March 1. Of the direct relief cases 4,168 were classed as unemployables.

Decision must be made whether there is to be a horizontal cut in all relief payments and expenditures to bring the total spending within the limits of the slashed estimates.

The alternative is to cut off relief all but the unemployables. This course would throw off relief at the end of this month approximately 5,000 persons and would prevent extension of relief to new applicants, except perhaps small emergency allotments in a comparatively few extraordinary cases.

The District's appropriation for direct relief during the current fiscal year was $2,000,000 which officials hoped to spread throughout the year at $166,666 a month. Withdrawal of Federal funds and additions to relief rolls of new families made necessary relief expenditures at a much higher monthly rate and were the principal factors in the need for a deficiency appropriation.

Whichever method of meeting the emergency is adopted, it seemed agreed that all supplementary relief payments to anyone having a WPA or other job would be stopped.

Much the same situation will apply during the next fiscal year, which begins July 1, with the additonal problem of deciding what, if anything, is to be done for the hundreds who must be cut off local

Extremist Mobs Sweep Madrid, Burn Churches

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, March 13.—Mobs of Extremists roamed the streets of the Spanish capital tonight, setting fire to churches and convents, and shouting "burn all the Pope's property."

The latest outbreak of political disturbances was the signal for an emergency meeting of cabinet ministers, after roving rioters had set fire to a newspaper plant, three church buildings, and had engaged in numerous street encounters.

Mounted police and civil guards charged madly through the streets in attempts to disperse the milling crowds.

The plant of La Nacion, Rightist newspaper, which criticized Leftists for the recent campaign of terrorism, was destroyed by fire.

The rioters transferred their attentions to the San Luis Church, in the busy downtown section, set fire to the building and held off crowds of spectators with machine guns and pistols.

As the flames from the burning church leaped high in the air, other fires were started at the San Ignacio Church and the Santa Isabel Convent.

A group of Extremists attempted to seize an armory, but were driven off after a sharp clash with police.

Alvaro Rodriguez, a Fascist youth, was stabbed by angry Socialists when he jeered laudatory ceremonies accorded the slain bodyguard of Prof. Luis Jiminez Asua, victim of an assassin's assault yesterday. Rodriguez is expected to die.

The mob attempted to chastize a woman who was alleged to have made slighting remarks about Jiminez, but she was rescued by police.

Strong guards were thrown around the offices of the Rightist newspapers El Debate and Informaciones, after a crowd of 500 Socialist youths had marched through the streets, shouting threats at the Rightist press.

Strong forces of Police rushed to the famous Church of Jesus near the Parliament Building, when it was reported that incendiaries had planned to set fire to the structure. The church, one of the most historic in Spain, houses Christian relics which are regarded as miraculous, and is visited on the first Friday of each month by thousands who seek religious favors.

Tipsy Driver, Haled to Court Still in His 'Cups,' Pays $110

Walter E. Howard, 24, appeared in Police Court today to stand trial for driving while drunk. The court said he still was drunk, or drunk again—and sought to sober him up with $110 in fines.

When first haled into court February 21, Howard pleaded not guilty and asked for a jury trial. This was to be accorded him yesterday.

"What is your address?" Judge Walter J. Casey asked him.

"It is 5603 Sixteenth street," Howard replied, "but that doesn't mean a damn thing."

"It doesn't!" snapped Casey. "Well, $10 or 10 days for contempt of court."

Judge Casey wrote a notation on the papers that Howard was intoxicated in court. At this point, Howard's attorney, E. B. Christian, and his bondsman, P. F. O'Connor, withdrew from the case.

Howard decided he didn't want a jury trial. He changed his plea to guilty and asked that Judge Casey try him. His wish was gratified, and Judge Casey fined him $100 or 30 days in jail. He paid.

Howard's record shows that he was arrested for reckless driving February 5, 15 days before Policeman J. B. Trettipoe got him for drunken driving. Judge Gus A. Schuldt found him guilty on the reckless driving charge, and his permit was ordered revoked by the Board of Revocations and Restorations.

He was ordered on February 10 to turn in his permit, but did not do so.

No charges of operating on a revoked permit or failing to turn in a revoked permit were made against him yesterday.

Large Campaign Gifts for Democrats, Liberty League Scarce.

By the Associated Press.

Reports submitted to the House for the first two months of this year disclosed yesterday that large contributions are pouring into the Republican National Committee, but that they are few and far between around Democratic headquarters and the American Liberty League.

During the first two months of the election year, the Republicans received contributions aggregating $261,387. More than a score of them were gifts of $5,000 or more. The Democrats, with few big gifts, collected $49,053. The Liberty League, which got $483,000 last year, received $64,702.

Despite the scarcity of contributions, the Democrats were spending much faster than the Republicans. Their income had been bolstered by $200,000 from Philadelphia, the convention city, and $270,000 from the Jackson Day dinners in cities from Coast to coast.

The Republican National committee started the year with $260,480, which, added to contributions, gave it a total of $521,387. It spent $165,599, leaving $356,288 in the treasury on March 1.

Democrats' Expenditures.

In contrast, the Democrats spent $322,900, out of $550,000, including a January 1 balance, leaving only $227,100 on hand March 1, of which $136,410 was owed on loans or in unpaid bills.

The Liberty League made no accounting of its financial standing, either at the beginning or end of the two months' period, but reported total receipts of $64,452 and expenditures of $108,175. Jouett Shouse, head of the organization, received $9,000 in salary and expenses during the period.

The reports indicated that the du Pont family of Wilmington, Del., which contributed a large portion of the Liberty League's funds last year, has transferred its support for the election year to the Republicans. No big du Pont contributions were listed by the league, but the Republican National Committee received $5,000 from Lammot du Pont and the Republican Congressional Committee reported $1,666 from him.

The Republicans received about 40 contributions of more than $1,000, while the Democrats listed only four and the Liberty League none. Some of the bigger contributions listed by the Republicans were:

Junius S. Morgan, New York, $5,000; James H. Douglas, jr., Chicago, $3,000; Alfred P. Sloan, jr., New York, $5,000; George F. Baker, New York, $5,000; William G. Mather, Cleveland, $2,000; Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Lanken, Cleveland, $2,500; W. L. Mellon, Pittsburgh, $2,500; J. Frank Drake, Pittsburgh, $2,500.

Other Contributions.

H. E. Manville, New York, $5,000; H. P. Davison, New York, $5,000; George B. Dryden, Evanston, $5,000; Mrs. Charles H. Schweppe, Lake Forest, Ill., $5,000; Mrs. D. S. Blossom, Cleveland, $2,000; Albert W. Harris, Chicago, $10,000; Lester Armour, Chicago, $4,000.

Large contributions to the Democrats included: Maurice E. Harrison, San Francisco, $5,000; M. W. Johnson, Ogden, Utah, $2,000; Arthur O. Olson, Tulsa, $3,500. In addition it was noted that Ralph Morrison, of San Antonio, Tex., who was recently appointed a member of the Federal Reserve Board, canceled a loan of $20,000, which in effect amounted to a contribution.

"Politics," Says Branch.

By the Associated Press.

Republican criticism of cancellation of air-mail contracts was called "purely political" yesterday by Harllee Branch, First Assistant Postmaster General.

In nswer to a "Lest We Forget" pamphlet issued by the National Republican Congressional Committee, Branch said in a radio speech "the old air-mail contracts were annulled by the Postmaster General after it had been clearly established that these contracts were entered into by fraud and collusion and in violation of the law, which specifically required that such contracts must be let at competitive bidding."

"Spoils conferences," to which "a selected list" of air transport executives were invited, he asserted, met with the Republican Postmaster General, "sat down around a table and agreed upon a division of the air-mail routes among themselves."

New Dealers Grow More Optimistic Over Roosevelt's Chances in November Election.

By Franklyn Waltman

PERHAPS it is the balmy spring air of the last few days in Washington, or perhaps there is good ground for the belief, but virtually all New Dealers suddenly have become more optimistic about President Roosevelt's chances in the November election. Indeed, some who had long faces a month or so ago now argue that Roosevelt cannot possibly be defeated.

Roosevelt is reported to have demonstrated to callers a new serenity—an absence of any signs of worry—not buoyancy, but an air of self-assurance. At the same time, he has been summoning various Republicans to his office and asking them to tell him frankly what they think is wrong with the New Deal. His petulance of several months ago seems to be gone, and instead he shows a desire to pursue the Greek command, "Know thyself."

The President's new attitude undoubtedly has buoyed up the spirits of those followers who come in daily contact with him. The New Dealers, however, point to more tangible developments to sustain their optimism.

They point out what amounts to the collapse of the anti-Roosevelt movements in Maryland and Massachusetts. In the former State the thud of Democratic leaders landing on the Roosevelt bandwagon, after the death of Albert C. Ritchie, has been music to their ears. The sweeping victory of the Roosevelt convention delegates in New Hampshire, and Joseph B. Ely's subsequent announcement that he had abandoned his fight to have Massachusetts send an uninstructed delegation to Philadelphia likewise have had pleasing, soothing sounds.

Turning from New England to the Pacific Coast, the New Dealers have gurgled their pleasure over the increasing margin of Democratic votes over Republican, as revealed to date in the California primary. Until 1934 Republicans had a majority on the registration books in the Golden State. In that year the Democrats, for the first time, registered more voters than the Republicans, but the margin was not so large.

The California registration is still in progress, but so far the Democrats are running far ahead of the Republicans—in some cases by almost two to one. The latest word here from Los Angeles County shows the party division of those who have registered to be 60 per cent Democratic to 40 per cent Republican. The Roosevelt camp interprets this news to mean without doubt that California will be in the Democratic column this year.

Republicans here assert that the registration so far does not indicate any losses in their following—that the increased Democratic margin comes from additional voters. The suspicion is that the new Democratic adherents are Townsendites—many registering for the first time. They contend that these new voters may turn out to be a disturbing, troublesome factor within the Democratic ranks. Some California Democrats in Congress are worried over that aspect of the matter.

Registration figures, however, are not always conclusive as to the political trend. There is a tendency well known in politics for the registration of the party in power to increase—that is, many persons for business or other reasons wish to be on record as belonging to the dominant party.

For instance, the Republican registration for the general election in 1932 in California showed 1,565,264 Republicans and 1,161,482 Democrats—a Republican majority of approximately 400,000. Yet President Roosevelt carried the State by approximately 470,000.

Paul C. Smith, executive editor of the San Francisco Chronicle, in a recent political article—which, incidentally, had a hostile Landon tinge to it, and for that reason apparently has been anonymously widely circulated—reports that Senator William E. Borah recently sent an advance guard to California, for the purpose of "lining up a Borah machine, in the event that it became practical to enter the California primaries."

"They searched every square inch of that vast State for so-called liberals of the Borah stamp," the San Francisco editor recited, and then added:

Which may explain why the Democratic registration has been going up.

The serenity reported from the White House has not yet reached Capitol Hill. There Congress seems to be developing a case of spring jitters, with two angry altercations between individual members occurring on the House floor in two successive days.

And over in the Senate the fiery young Senator, Rush D. Holt, of West Virginia, is taking Huey Long's place, for colorful vituperation against Administration figures—and rapidly is becoming a thorn in the side of not only the New Deal, but of his senior colleague, Senator Matthew M. Neely.

When the youthful Holt was elected to the Senate, he lacked almost a year of the minimum age limit of 30. Senator Neely talked himself hoarse in cloakrooms and corridors, trying to persuade Senate leaders the youth should be seated. The Senate compromised, making young Holt wait until his thirtieth birthday. Senator Neely undoubtedly has seen the error of his arguments, and probably now believes that none under the age of at least 35 years should be admitted to the Senate.

Pity poor T. B. Kingsbury, Washington manager for the Western Union. Is he in a hot spot? If he refuses to deliver the Strawn telegrams to the Black committee, he may find himself in contempt of the Senate, and if he delivers them he is certain to be found in contempt of the District of Columbia Supreme Court.

District Relief Slashed

WPA jobs by June 30 under orders from Harry L. Hopkins, Federal works administrator. There are 8,500 persons on such WPA jobs at present.

The $1,500,000 carried in the District appropriation bill for next year, as passed by the House, will not permit any expansion of the reduced relief program after the beginning of the next fiscal year, it was said.

Elwood Street, Director of Public Welfare, estimated the House appropriation would be sufficient to care for between 500 and 1,000 more than the unemployables who are, and may be expected to be on relief rolls, if they are cared for on the present scale of payments.

Relief officials were frankly dubious that regular jobs would take care of many who must be cut off entirely or suffer reduced relief payments. The Federal service is the backbone of employment in the National Capital, it was pointed out. Federal jobs are more and more stringently being held for deserving party workers who have endorsement of the party leaders in their places of legal residence outside the District. Washington has no industries which may be expected to boom and provide large numbers of private jobs, it was pointed out.

Some relief may be found in the operation of the crippled children and blind and old age aid laws. Of the 4,168 unemployables now on relief, 1,100 have applied for old-age payments. These applications have not been passed on. Some 400 more of the unemployables are expected to make application. In the end, it is estimated the number who will receive old-age aid will be between 1,000 and 1,100, not all of whom however, may now be on relief.

N. J. Chairmen Indorse Landon As State Choice

County G. O. P. Heads are Awaiting Actions of State Committee.

By the United Press.

Trenton, N. J., March 13.—The State Association of Republican County Chairmen tonight unanimously indorsed Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas for their party's Presidential nomination and urged that the New Jersey G. O. P. delegation to the Cleveland convention in June support him.

Charles H. Mitchell, of Trenton, chairman of the State association, introduced the Landon resolution. It was the first move by the State's responsible Republican leaders in support of any candidate, and political circles are anxious to see what effect the indorsement will have on the Republican State Committee, which is scheduled to meet here Tuesday to select delegates-at-large to the national convention.

Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, titular head of the party and regarded as a possible Vice Presidential candidate, has been striving to avoid pledging the New Jersey delegation to any candidate.

Borah to Enter.

Senator Borah of Idaho definitely decided last night to enter the California primary May 5 as part of his effort to win the Republican Presidential nomination.

Carl G. Bachman, president of the Borah-for-President organization, issued the following statement:

"I have authorized E. Weaver Campbell, of Los Angeles, to prepare and circulate the petitions necessary for Senator William E. Borah to enter the California primary. The time for filing petitions closes March 26 and Senator Borah will make formal announcement in the next few days relative to campaigning in California."

Borah already has entered the primaries of Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Nebraska.

California Picks Slate.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, March 13.—Supporters of Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas, announced selection today of a California delegation slate pledged, if successful at the May 5 primary election, to vote for his nomination for President at the Republican National Convention.

A few hours later, the Borah-for-President campaign committee met in a night session to consider a Borah slate.

Senator Borah has consented formally to entry of his name in California.

Ross G. Marshall, southern California campaign manager for the Landon supporters, said the Kansan has approved the pledging of a California slate to him. Gov. Landon, however, has not made any formal announcement of candidacy for the Presidential nomination and usually has declined to comment on movements in his behalf. (At Topeka, Kans., his office said he was away on a brief vacation.)

Gov. Frank F. Merriam of California, who has been considered a potential Presidential candidate, recently announced his support of Gov. Landon. Several of his friends and political advisers did likewise.

The Landon slate of 44 included seven State senators and six State assemblymen.

The four prospective delegates-at-large are former Representative Joe Crail, former Superior Judge Robert M. Clarke, of Los Angeles; former State Senator Tallant Tubbs, of San Francisco, and William A. Sherman, Saratoga, Calif., fraternal leader.

G. O. P. Works on Slate.

Oakland, Calif., March 13 (AP).—Earl Warren, Republican State chairman, said today a committee still was working on plans for an uninstructed delegation to the Republican National Convention.

Informed of the announcement that a delegate slate pledged to Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas for the Presidential nomination had been announced by his supporters in Los Angeles, Warren said

"The committee which has been appointed to arrange for an uninstructed delegation is still earnestly engaged in its effort to accomplish that purpose, and it can be expected to make a public announcement within the next few days."

Former President Herbet Hoover is an advocate of uninstructed delegations.

Test for New Deal.

Columbus, Ohio, March 13 (AP).—President Roosevelt was assured tonight of Ohio's 52 votes for renomination at the Philadelphia convention, but the New Deal faced a popularity test in the Ohio primary May 12.

The close of primary entries found Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, pitted against the field for control of the Republican delegation to the Cleveland convention.

Hearst Charges Conspiracy in Lobby Inquiry

Second Suit Names Black Group, F.C.C., and Asks Return of Telegrams.

The Black Lobby Committee and the Federal Communications Commission were charged with conspiracy in a suit filed in District Supreme Court yesterday by William Randolph Hearst, newspaper publisher. Hearst asked the court to compel the committee to return to him any of his telegrams that it has seized.

The suit, adding to the legal tangle in which the lobby investigators have been snarled, was the first naming either the committee or the Communications Commission as defendants. Previous suits have been to restrain the Western Union Telegraph Co. from delivering messages to the committee.

The new action will give the committee an opportunity to defend itself directly and will open the way for an appeal to the United States Supreme Court. Justice Alfred A. Wheat, of the District Court, Wednesday issued an order enjoining the telegraph company from turning over to the committee telegrams of Winston, Strawn & Shaw, Chicago law firm. Yesterday he signed an order making the injunction permanent.

Hearst, naming the members of the committee and of the Communications Commission individually as defendants, charged they "conspired, combined and confederated together to deprive the plaintiff of his constitutional rights and liberties under the first, fourth and fifth amendments of the Constitution."

The suit was the second filed by Hearst in connection with the lobby investigation. The first, filed Thursday, asked that the Western Union be enjoined from turning a specific telegram, over to the committee. Justice Wheat denied a temporary restraining order indicating he preferred to hear the case on its merits. Dates for hearing have not been set in either instance, but it is expected arguments will be heard next week.

Hearst's petition was accompanied by supporting affidavits of Jerome D. Barnum, of Syracuse, N. Y., president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association; Thomas J. White, general manager of the Hearst enterprises, and Elisha Hanson, Hearst's attorney.

Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), Alabama, chairman of the lobby committee, commented that "it looks as though we'll have to appeal to the supreme court of the Liberty League for their advice on how to protect the liberties of the Senate."

"It is not surprising that the Liberty League, Hearst and others who consider themselves bigger than the Government should attempt to enjoin the Senate. It may be possible for them to find a judge somewhere who would enjoin the Senate from passing, or even considering, a bill opposed by the Liberty League and those who want to fasten their own control upon the Government.

"The Senate committee was appointed by the Senate as its representative and of course if the Senate's committee can be enjoined it would logically follow that the Senate itself could be enjoined."

Townsend Bloc Charges 'Trick' In Inquiry Fund

Pension Supporters Object as $50,000 Is Granted for Study.

By the United Press

Amid angry cries of "trickery" and "back alley tactics," the House agreed yesterday to spend $50,000 to find out if there is any "racket" in promotion of old-age pension schemes.

Backers of the Townsend Plan to pay everybody more than 60 a $200-a-month pension objected to the size of the appropriation in an hour of rowdy debate before it was approved without a record vote.

The money will be used for expenses of an investigating committee headed by Representative C. Jasper Bell, who hopes to start hearings next week and promises "startling information" about financing of the Townsend and similar movements.

The only vote yesterday was 241 to 112 against a motion which would have permitted amendment of the $50,000 appropriation resolution.

It was the first time the Townsend bloc, which numbers about 60 members, had shown any signs of fight. Townsendites reiterated their willingness for the investigation, but argued that $50,000 was excessive. They made unsuccessful attempts to clip it to $10,000.

This argument was that national headquarters of the plan are in Washington with books and officers easily available. Bell, however, said the Townsend organization had four area offices in addition to directors in every State, and that $50,000 was essential "if the American people are to have all the facts."

Red-haired Joseph P. Monaghan was on his feet as soon as debate began, with a point of order against the resolution. It turned out he had five points of order, one of them charging that the resolution contained "insulting language."

Monoghan, amid continuel clamor, argued for 15 minutes before it was discovered the insulting language was in the investigation resolution, already passed. The word he objected to was "scheme." He tried to read a definition from Webster's dictionary, but Speaker Joseph W. Byrns ruled him out of order.

Monoghan complained that the resolution was passed when he was not in the House by "very tricky procedure."

Immediately Representative Zioncheck leaped to his feet, anger coloring his face. Representative William P. Connery rushed over and grabbed Monoghan's arm.

"I demand that language be withdrawn," shouted Zioncheck while Connery said something to Monoghan in an undertone.

"I withdraw it," said Monaghan.

For the second time this week Byrns halted proceedings to lecture the House.

"The gentlemen must refrain from personalities," he said with anger.

Representative Charles Kramer charged Bell's committee with "using back alley tactics—using the methods of a cheap detective agency," but he did not elaborate on the charge.

One of the last to speak was Representative Verner Main, who was elected to Congress with Townsend support.

"Daniel Boone," he began, "no longer need turn in his grave at the use of the word 'boondoggle.' The Bell committee comes seeking a boon of $50,000. The chairman of the committee comes from Missouri, a State that specializes in dogs—hound dogs—that howl."

Bang! went the gavel as Main's one minute of time expired. Gathering his papers together the gray-haired little man started trotting up the aisle to his seat, and as he ran he sang:

"Git along, little doggie, get along."

Fatal 13 'Jinx' Follows British Physician Through Trial.

By the Associated Press.

Manchester, England, March 13.—Traditionally swift British justice tonight sentenced Dr. Buck Ruxton to pay with his life for the "Devil's Beeftub" murder of his wife.

Sixty-two minutes after receiving the case a jury of farmers and townsfolk convicted the Indian-blooded physician. Presiding Justice Singleton immediately sentenced him to be hanged.

Mumbling incoherently, the doctor was led away to his cell, his behavior strangely contrasted to the emotional outbursts he had exhibited on the witness stand.

From the first he had denied he had, as the Crown charged, throttled his wife, cut up her body and tossed the mutilated parts into a lonely ravine called the "Devil's Beeftub." His denial was equally strong to the prosecution charge he had bludgeoned a nursemaid, Mary Jane Rogerson, to death.

"The law knows but one sentence for the terrible crime you have committed," the judge told the white-faced prisoner.

Earlier, in his instructions to the jury, Justice Singleton had declared the Crown had built up the strongest possible case on circumstantial evidence."

The jinx of the "thirteenth" followed Ruxton to the end of the trial. He was arrested for the murder on September 13, 1935, after charwoman had found clothes, carpets, and curtains in his home spattered with blood. There, the Crown alleged, he killed the two women, cut up their bodies, and attempted to remove all traces of the killings.

The blood, the physician testified between fits of sobbing, had come from his own veins when he cut his hand opening a can of fruit.

On December 13, the doctor was committed for trial. Today, again the thirteenth, he heard his fate pronounced.

'Merchant of Venice' in Schools Arouses Wide Protest, Defense

New Jersey Rabbi Calls Shakespeare Drama Prejudicial to Jews; Philadelphia Patriot Opposes Ban; Brooklyn Pastor Enters Dispute.

By the Associated Press.

Hackensack, N. J., March 13.—The dispute over whether Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice" should be taught in Hackensack High School extended far beyond the city limits today.

The campaign to strike the drama from the high school curriculum was launched by Rabbi Irving Silman, who protested it was prejudicial to the Jewish people.

With residents of the city divided on the issue, which is being considered by a special committee of the community council, Charles B. Helms, Philadelphia, of the Patriotic Order of Sons of America, and Dr. Alexander Lyons, of the Eighth Avenue Temple, Brooklyn, entered the controversy.

Helms sent a telegram "protesting most vehemently" the move to ban the play, while Dr. Lyons sided with Rabbi Silman, with the declaration that "Hackensack residents are warranted in objecting to the play's being taught."

Rabbi Silman, who succeeded in having an English class dramatization of the play suspended, pending a board of education ruling, carried the fight to the community council, composed of nearly all of the city's civic and religious organizations.

A committee was named to study the question. It planned to report to the council's executive committee tomorrow night.

Rabbi Silman contends one of the play's chief characters, Shylock, the money lender, falsely maligns the Jewish race. He described the play as "the foulest slander ever penned by the hand of genius."

In his telegram, Helms said the Sons of America "protest most vehemently any action to bar the 'Merchant of Venice' from schools, because of objections from any minority groups. Such a step would establish a precedent for similar complaints from other nationalist and religious groups, resulting in chaotic censorship and abridgement of the rights of American citizens to entire separation of church and state."

Grady, Trade Treaty Expert, To Resign Post

California Dean Explains His Act Is Due to Expiration of Leave.

By the Associated Press.

Henry F. Grady, one of the mainsprings in the Roosevelt Administration's reciprocal trade treaty drive, announced last night he would return to the University of California as dean of the college of commerce on July 1.

As chief of the Trade Agreements Division in the State Department, under supervision of Secretary Hull and Assistant Secretary Sayre, has had active charge of negotiating and drafting the 11 trade pacts with foreign countries already concluded.

Designed to expand commerce by reducing excessive tariffs, reciprocal agreements with Finland, Gautemala and Costa Rica are now in the final stages of negotiation. They probably will be concluded before Grady's departure.

Although Secretary Hull has made no announcement concerning a new chief of the Trade Agreements Division, Harry C. Hawkins, assistant chief, now in Paris in connection with the proposed French pact, is mentioned as a successor.

Grady said the sole reason for resigning was to fulfill his obligations to the university. He has been dean of the institutions' College of Commerce since 1928.

"I came to Washington to assist in organizing the trade agreements program on a one year's leave of absence," Grady explained. "The president and regents extended my leave an additional year when we were in the midst of negotiating some important pacts."

Mrs. Grady is one of the Roosevelt delegates at large from California to the Democratic convention in Philadelphia in June, and Grady plans to return to Berkeley immediately after the convention.

Mother Wins Baby's Custody From Rich Kin

Millionaire Manufacturer and Son Lose Suit Over 15-Month-Old Boy.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 13.—Pretty Juanita Borg, 19, won a complete victory today in her court battle with her millionaire father-in-law, George W. Borg, for custody of her 15-month-old son.

Denying the petition of the manufacturer for a habeas corpus writ for return of the boy, Judge Michael Feinberg held "the right of a child" to a mother's care supersedes even the advantages an indulgent grandparent could provide, and sustained her right to keep the infant she took from the Borg summer home in Delavan, Wis., last summer.

Ending of the two-day court hearing in her favor brought only the comment that she was "very happy" from the young mother.

It was on the basis of a legal wardship established for him over the child last summer in Walworth County, Wis., that the senior Borg sought a writ for the boy's return from his mother. He claimed she was "an unfit person" to have charge of the rearing.

After the opinion was delivered, George Marshall Borg, 21, who sided with his father and against his estranged wife in the proceedings, took her arm and walked off for a short conference to arrange for his seeing the boy.

The young woman, who filed separate maintenance action against him this week, had denied her father-in-law's charges of neglecting the child, asserted he had wrecked her marriage of two years by a campaign of humiliation, and said she would be willing to consider reconciliation with her husband if he "changed his ways" and threw off the domination of his wealthy father.

Professor Urges Death Of Subnormal Children

Portland, Oreg., March 13 (AP). Dr. Alexander Goldenweiser, professor of sociology at Reed College here, joined a contemporary today in advocating death for hopelessly feeble minded children.

Dr. Goldenweiser, formerly a lecturer at Columbia University and the new school for social research in New York, said he believed laws to permit such action "are needed from a humanitarian standpoint."

His comment followed publication of an interview in which Dr. S. B. Laughlin of Willamette University said "one has only to visit the Oregon State feeble minded home and look at those children lying in bed, unable to lift their heads from their pillows, to agree with me that they should be chloroformed."

Flier George Haldeman Weds Florida Teacher

Lakeland, Fla., March 13 (AP).—Friday the thirteenth again played an important part in the life of George Haldeman, noted aviator, as he and Miss Mary Louise Hoffman were married here today.

With Ruth Elder, Haldeman was rescued at sea after being forced down October 13, 1927, in an attempt to fly the Atlantic. He made his first solo flight on a Friday the thirteenth.

Mrs. Haldeman is a Lakeland school teacher.

Widow Refuses to Reveal Contents of Deposit Box of Budget Aid.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, March 13.—The Department of Justice joined local authorities today in investigating the disappearance of $349,000 in city trust funds from a bank which led to the suicide of Harry M. Tyler, assistant city budget director.

While city officials assembled evidence indicating that the free-spending Tyler obtained at least part of the money by forging checks on the teachers' retirement fund, interest centered on a search for possible accomplices.

One phase of the investigation was delayed today when Tyler's widow, returning hurriedly from a vacation trip in an automobile he had given her, refused to open Tyler's safety deposit box. Officers at once asked for a court order to open the box.

Ben E. Young, vice president of the National Bank of Detroit, announced after a secret conference with city officials that the Federal agents had been called into the case.

Albert E. Cobo, city treasurer, who said "absolute proof that Tyler embezzled the money is in the hands of the police," charged the bank with responsibility for the loss. Both he and William J. Curran, city comptroller, asserted that the bank paid the money to Tyler without authorization and without the signature of anyone in the treasurer's office.

Tyler's suicide in his richly appointed home came a few hours after the shortage had been disclosed.

Bulgaria and Greece Deny Warlike Moves

Athens, Greece, March 13 (AP).—Rumors circulated widely today that Greece was massing troops on the Bulgarian frontier to meet a reported threat by Bulgaria to repudiate the Neuilly Treaty. Greek officials denied quickly that any such move was contemplated, and the Bulgarian legation denied equally emphatically that Bulgaria had any such intentions.

The Treaty of Neuilly, one of the World War treaties, was signed between the Allies and Bulgaria at Neuilly, suburb of Paris, November 27, 1919. Bulgaria ceded Thrace to Greece, returned its Serbian conquests and agreed to pay indemnity in money and coal.

The Connecticut River forced 100 families at East Hartford into leaving their homes.

Hundreds of highways throughout the six New England States lay under 2 to 6 feet of water and ice, schools were closed, factories shut down, railroad, telephone and telegraph service disrupted.

Floods subsided in northern New Hampshire, Vermont, Western Massachusetts, Rhode Island and most of Connecticut, as cold winds retarded the thaw.

Pennsylvania—

A family of four died at Kingston, across the Susquehanna River from Wilkes-Barre, when floodwaters marooned their home and broke a gas main, sending fumes throughout the house.

Coast Guard and Red Cross crews were sent into the anthracite regions along the Susquehanna, which continued rising. Heaviest damage was inflicted in Wilkes-Barre, Kingston, Nanticoke, Wyoming and Harrisburg. More than 500 families were routed from their homes, and 1,500 others were ready to leave.

The Delaware River overflowed at Easton, leaving the water front covered with debris. More than a score of persons were made homeless.

The Delaware and Schuylkill rivers, after causing minor damage in the Philadelphia area, began to recede.

New York—

Five men were marooned without food in an oil company office on the Hudson River bank at Rensselaer. Between 20 and 30 tugs and barges, and a 100-foot excursion yacht, were fast in an ice jam at Kingston, after being torn from their moorings and swept a mile and a half downriver. Freezing temperature checked the thaw in other up-State areas.

New Jersey—

Mayor Douglas Mead, of Rutherford, warned residents along the Passaic River front to be ready to abandon their homes, as the stream threatened to go over its retaining wall. Four hundred homeless persons were housed in churches and public buildings at Mountain View and Bloomingdale. Police boats patroled the pleasureland section of Oakland, carrying food to marooned families.

Quebec—

Thirteen persons died in the maritime provinces, eleven in Quebec, one in Ontario and one in Nova Scotia.

Five young children drowned at La Martine when the home of Elzear Buteau was swept away by the Little St. Francis River. Their parents and five other children, escaped.

Mrs. Henri DuClos and her three young children drowned at St. Tites des Caps, where Mrs. Xavier Cauchon was drowned the day before.

Jacqueline Blackburn, 5, and Joseph Trembay, 4, drowned at Baie St. Paul, a few miles distant, and Henry Mosher, 19, was drowned at Mosherville, N. S. Archie Irwin died from exposure after falling into the Moira River at Belleville, Ont.

Relief, Housing Issues Studied By Roosevelt

Hopes for Solution Before Fishing Trip; Confers With Experts.

By Felix Bruner.

President Roosevelt struggled yesterday with two knotty problems, which he hopes to solve before he goes on his Florida fishing expedition next Thursday, the problem of the proposed relief appropriation, and the recommendations of a housing program.

Until late last night the President met with relief and financial experts in another of a series of conferences, leading to preparation of his relief message, which he expects to send to Congress next week.

Attending the conference were Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator; Corrington Gill, WPA accounting expert, and Daniel Bell, acting director of the budget.

Earlier in the day, the President met with a group of housing experts in an attempt to form a definite program from a maze of conflicting suggestions. Attending this meeting were Stewart McDonald, head of the Federal Housing Administration; Peter Grimm, Treasury housing expert; Marriner Eccles, governor of the Federal Reserve Board; Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and John Fahey, head of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Heated Controversy.

The relief problem, already a subject of serious conflict in Congress, is expected within the next few days to be the center of the most heated controversy of the present session. In the Senate, and on the air, Administration spokesmen have come to the defense of the Hopkins organization, in face of charges that the Administration has been "playing politics with human needs."

Senator Rush Holt (Democrat), West Virginia, returned to his home State yesterday, with the intention of uncovering more evidence to be used in his fight on the Hopkins organization. In the Senate Thursday, he described denials of relief politics in West Virginia as "whitewash" and "lies."

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt continued to decline to give any hint as to the amount of money he will ask Congress to appropriate for relief. Funds of the Works Progress Administration are nearly exhausted, but the Administration is expected to go into the next fiscal year with more than $1,000,000,000 earmarked for other agencies and unspent.

It was considered certain that the President will transfer some of this money to the Hopkins organization, thus cutting the amount that will need to be appropriated. The WPA is gradually cutting the number of people on its work relief rolls, as well as its administrative organization, thus reducing expenses.

Press Conference.

At Roosevelt's press conference yesterday, he was asked concerning the charge that there was politics in relief. He replied that politics was the answer to the charge.

Senator Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, indicated that he will press for consideration of his resolution, asking for an investigation of relief administration. Charges of politics in relief have been constantly coming out of Pennsylvania. Former Gov. Gifford Pinchot is leading a drive against the Hopkins organization.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, also has been demanding an investigation. The Davis resolution is in the hands of the Committee on Expenditures, headed by Senator Lewis (Democrat), Illinois. Lewis said it was not definite when he would convene the committee.

Less bitter, but as much divided, is sentiment on the housing program. Behind the scenes has been going on a struggle of considerable proportions within the Administration. Indications yesterday were that the problem may be worked out by abandoning most of the proposed housing schemes, and doing very little of anything.

Congress already has before it a bill, introduced by Senator Fletcher (Democrat), Florida, extending the repair and modernization feature of the Federal Housing Administration act until the end of the current year. It would have expired April 1. The more important section of the act, that covering insurance of mortgages, does not expire, and it is doubtful whether it will be touched.

Slum Clearance.

This leaves the problem of slum clearance and Government building of houses, over which Administration agencies are split. The most frequently suggested plan is a housing agency, which would make loans and grants to local authorities for the building of slum clearance projects, with little, if any construction by the Government itself. This would not interfere with projects already started. That the Government intends to do little more direct building was indicated recently, when it dismissed the suit in the Supreme Court contesting its right to condemn land for slum clearance.

McDonald said that one of the difficulties in connection with a housing program is the difference in cost of construction among various localities.

Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with anything less than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble to aid nature to soothe and heal the inflamed membranes as the germ-laden phlegm is loosened and expelled.

Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, your druggist is authorized to guarantee Creomulsion and to refund your money if you are not satisfied with results from the very first bottle. Get Creomulsion right now. (Adv.)

President Calls Housing Chiefs to White House

Harris & Ewing.

5 Auto Drivers Lose Permits; 20 Suspended

Board Metes Out Punishment to Speeders on District Streets.

Five permits were revoked for speeding and 20 persons received suspensions ranging from 15 to 45 days by the Board of Revocations and Restorations yesterday.

Those whose permits were revoked are Charles F. Hanson, of 5028 Illinois avenue northwest, 50 miles; Raymond D. Stouck, of 1729 North Capitol street, 55 miles; Martin A. Strones, of 1630 Sixteenth street southeast, 50 miles; Parker P. Vito, of 3908 Thirteenth street northeast, 52 miles, and Rex Wills, of Takoma Park, Md., 60 miles.

Zebulon Stafford, of the McReynolds Apartments, Eighteenth and G streets northwest, drew a 45-day suspension for second offense at 40 miles an hour.

Thirty-day suspensions were given John F. Deeds, Jr., of 3419 Oliver street northwest, 48 miles; Cyrus C. Fishburn, of 134 Fairmont avenue, Bethesda, Md., 40 miles; James W. Douglas, Jr., 1115 Lamont street northwest, 30 miles, second offense; Mark A. Maloney, 497 E street southwest, 40 miles; Louis M. Miller, 7624 Thirteenth street northwest, 40 miles; William A. Norton, Suitland, Md., 40 miles; Robert E. Parsons, 3719 Van Ness street northwest, 45 miles; Everett R. Peterson, Bennings, D. C., 40 miles and Harry R. Small, 1912 Irving street northeast, 40 miles.

Fifteen-day suspensions were given Harry Davis, 1372 Seaton street northwest, 38 miles; Jack B. Diamond 3d, 5619 First street northwest, 35 miles; Norman L. Fullman, 1919 Calvert street northwest, 38 miles; Frederick Sasier, East Falls Church, Va., 38 miles; Sol Seigel, 5701 Thirteenth street northwest, 38 miles; Kenneth J. Silvey, 5132 Seventh street northwest, 38 miles; Stanley S. Surrey, 1620 Fuller street northwest, 36 miles; Joseph Week, Lafayette Hotel, 36 miles; Fred Wheeler, 1806 New Jersey avenue northwest and John M. York, East Falls Church, Va., 35 miles.

New Virginia Park Work to Start Monday

Roanoke, Va., March 13 (AP).—The National Park Service office here was notified yesterday that construction of another Virginia section of the Blue Ridge Parkway south of Roanoke will get under way Monday. The section is that from Pine Spur to Smart, the latter in Floyd County near the Franklin County line.

Shovels will be moved in Monday and clearing and grubbing operations will begin. Clearing, grubbing and excavating already has begun on five other sections of the parkway.

Ticket Fixing Here Denied

traffic committee, who attacked so-called ticket "fixing" before the subcommittee Thursday.

"It is easy enough to make some loose statement or other, but we have been unable to learn of any specific 'fixing' cases," said Carpenter at the conclusion of Offutt's testimony.

Meanwhile, Senator King (Democrat), Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee, announced yesterday he would discuss plans for a Senate inquiry into alleged immunity and special privilege abuses when his committee meets today.

It is probable, he said, that a special sub-committee will be appointed to start an investigation when the House probe is finished.

"If we find the subject needs further investigation, we will widen the scope of what already has been covered," King said.

Law Enforcement Is Problem.

During the early part of his testimony, Offut told the Traffic Committee that Washington's immediate problem was law enforcement.

"Our police force is not of adequate size to impress the motorist that if he violates the law he is sure to be caught," Offutt said.

He described the drunken driver as the worst type of public menace and cited a large percentage of drivers convicted of this charge who were placed on probation in 1935. In these cases, he said, there should be a greater understanding between police, the corporation counsel's office and the courts.

A scathing denunciation of Washington parking lots came from William A. Roberts, peoples' counsel. Not only are these lots a menace to safety, but they present unsightly spots in otherwise attractive sections, he declared.

He cited a parking lot on downtown Fourteenth street as "the most unsightly in Washington."

"This lot, privately owned, is jammed in between Government buildings on property which was originally planned for a beautiful plaza," Roberts said.

Add to Rush Hour Snarls.

During rush hour periods, automobiles speed across an unprotected sidewalk, endangering pedestrians and adding to traffic congestion, he said.

At this point, he interrupted his own testimony to say:

"And a great deal of the congestion along the Government triangle is due to the stupidity of engineers who closed Thirteenth street south of Pennsylvania avenue in the name of beauty."

Approximately 773,911 square feet is now occupied by parking lots in the downtown area, Roberts told the committee. He said private parking lot operators are making tremendous sums by charging motorists more than they are required to pay for gasoline.

Roberts pointed out that $89,000 a month is paid for parking privileges, and at the same time advocated a system of Government owned parking spaces.

A plan to speed up mass transportation—street cars and buses—also was suggested by Roberts as a safety measure. At one downtown intersection, he said, 80 street cars were counted during a 15-minute period.

Must Speed Mass Transportation.

"If we don't speed up mass transportation, citizens are going to turn more and more to private transportation, bringing more and more accidents, injuries and deaths," said Roberts.

In another safety proposal, Roberts suggested establishment of a drivers' school, to be operated under supervision of the Department of Vehicles and Traffic.

He also suggested a 4-mile street car subway from south of Pennsylvania avenue, with entrances north of Thomas circle on Fourteenth street, north of Dupont circle on Connecticut avenue and west of the Supreme Court Building. The subway would end at a point near Twenty-first street and could be done for an initial cost of $16,000,000, he added.

John Nolen, jr., of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, was yesterday's final witness. He discussed locations of Government buildings in relation to traffic congestion.

Union Dispute Strands Major Bowes' Amateurs

Roanoke, Va., March 13 (AP).—Unit No. 2 of Maj. Edward Bowes' amateurs on tour was temporarily stranded here this afternoon, its bus and theatrical equipment attached.

The action was the result of an eleventhhour dispute said to have been caused by refusal of the unit manager, Fred Marshall, to allow the actors on the stage of a non-union theater unless the theater officials and local stage operators and musicians union reached an agreement.

Walsh Charges U. S. 'Accepted' Soviet Rebuke

G. U. Official Sees National Humiliation in Notes on Propaganda.

A "national humiliation" in the recent exchange of notes with Soviet Russia was charged to the Roosevelt Administration last night by Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., Georgetown University vice president, in a Gaston Hall lecture.

He accused the New Deal of astonishing world diplomacy by relaxing its demands for cessation of revolutionary activity against the United States on Soviet territory and of swallowing "Soviet impertinence."

Secretary Hull's August note of protest, Walsh said, was couched in strong language.

"On August 27," he added, "the Soviet government administered a most resounding slap in the face to the sovereignty of the United States by flatly rejecting the note, refusing to entertain the complaint and reading a lesson about ignorance to the Secretary of State.

"The tension and the expectation increased throughout the country. Evidently there was but one decent thing to do.

Second Note Tame.

"But a few days later a second note was dispatched from Washington to the Soviet government, which to the astonishment of the chanceries of the world accepted the insult and merely reiterated the substance of the previous warning with its threat of 'serious consequences.'

"But there was a change of tone and language. The first note shook the diplomatic fist, the second wiggled an admonishing finger.

"I will not read the text of that final note because I consider it a national humiliation which I sincerely do not care to emphasize at this time. But I can find few parallels in a rather long study of the international relations of the United States.

"I confess my utter inability to understand or interpret the acceptation by the Government of the United States of the Soviet impertinence. Can you?"

Father Walsh devoted a large part of his lecture to replying to statements made by Josef Stalin, Soviet dictator, in a recent newspaper interview with Roy W. Howard.

Denies Stalin Claim.

He took issue with Stalin's claim that his government observes all international obligations and engages in no foreign propaganda.

"To deny one article of his faith," Dr. Walsh said, "is a minor peccadillo for a Bolshevik statesman if he can deceive or confuse prospective neophytes during times of political uncertainty.

"The central headquarters of international communism, the Soviet State, finds itself at present in just such circumstances.

"Viewing with alarm the Japanese menace on Russia's Eastern frontier and still smarting under Mr. Hitler's ruthless suppression of the Communist Party in Germany, Mr. Stalin holds out an olive branch towards the United States in the hope of decoying woodcocks to alight on his gloved hand and not detect the steel beneath the velvet snare."

Dr. Walsh charged Stalin with embarking "on the ridiculous defense of describing the American Communists who met in Moscow last August as political emigres enjoying the hospitality of the Soviet Union."

Gathering at Trinity College today, students from District Catholic colleges and from other Eastern institutions of the same denomination will discuss and study problems of peace and its relation to Catholicism. More than a score of undergraduates will address the peace conference.

Sessions will be held in the morning and the afternoon. Chairman of the forenoon meeting will be the Rev. Donald A. MacLean. The Right Rev. Mgr. Patrick J. McCormick, acting rector of Catholic University, will be in charge in the afternoon.

Gas Barrage Traps Bandit

Department of Justice, began his career of crime at the age of 15, after he had migrated from his home in Pipestone, S. Dak., to the West Coast.

Records show that he was arrested for petit larceny and committed to the State Training School at Chehalis, Wash., in 1910. He served a year and a half, and then escaped.

He next was heard from when he was arrested for burglary and jail breaking in Tacoma, Wash. He was sentenced one to five years in the State penitentiary in 1912. He was discharged January 14, 1914.

Pursuing his zigzag course of crime, he was picked up once more by the Tacoma police September 5, 1916, for grand larceny and turned over to the authorities in Seattle. He went to the State penitentiary again. He was paroled in July, 1918.

He was arrested as a parole violator November 29, 1918, and returned to prison. He was paroled in July, 1920. He violated his parole in December of the same year, but was not recaptured.

But Bentz meanwhile had decided the United States was not healthy for a person of his habits, and after his final 1920 release from the Washington prison he went into Canada, going to Vancouver, B. C., where he was arrested late in 1920 on a charge of entering a house.

He gave the name of Miles Dannecher. He broke jail in the Canadian port two days after the dominion's police had nabbed him.

Several months later, as Jack C. Kearns, Bentz turned up in St. Louis, Mo., back at his old tricks. He was held as a suspicious character, but was released.

A new alias had been acquired by Bentz when he reached Kansas City. Here he impersonated an officer and was fined $100. His assumed name this time was Arthur Desmond.

Arrested in Detroit.

For several years Bentz went under the name of Ned Dewey. He took to robbing stores in the daytime. He was arrested in Detroit and was sentenced to Jackson, where he served a year and a half.

Apparently fond of Michigan, he went to Paw Paw, where he was arrested in 1924 for possession of a stolen automobile. He served 20 days for the theft.

In September, 1925, he was sent to State prison, Waupun, Wis., for burglary. He served a year.

Bentz then returned to the Pacific Northwest, where he favored Seattle with another visit. This time he used his real name when he was picked up for investigation and released.

Jumped Bail Bond.

He again was arrested in Seattle March 25, 1932, and charged with being a fugitive in connection with a bank robbery in Madison, Ind. He beat the charge.

In the Southwest, a new part of the world for Bentz, the police got him again. It was in Dallas, on a charge of bank robbery at Colfax, Wash.

He was released on bond in Dallas. Bentz forfeited the bond and vanished.

He was not apprehended again until Federal agents led him away from his dumbwaiter fortress in Brooklyn, resigned and somewhat relieved, yesterday

Aids Appointed To Administer Jobs Insurance

Robert E. Doyle Heads List of Key Men in Set-up for District.

The Unemployment Compensation Commission yesterday selected its keymen for administration of the District's job insurance law.

Heading the list was Robert E. Doyle, son of a former Metropolitan Police captain, who will be chief assistant to John A. Marshall, executive director of the commission.

John L. Bischoff, stepson of Representative Tilman B. Parks, of Arkansas, was chosen as assistant attorney. Other key appointees included Thomas S. Jackson as chief field examiner and Roy Karl von Lewinski and Winston R. Renshaw field examiners.

Doyle has been assistant marshal, without pay, for the last few months. Previously he was engaged in the outdoor advertising and real estate businesses. His home is at 1400 Fairmont street northwest. His salary will be $3,800.

Bischoff has been aiding in the drafting of compensation law regulations for several months and was employed under several emergency works projects. He also has been working for the commission without pay. He will receive $2,600 a year.

All appointees, according to Marshall, have resided in the District for some time. The average length of residence, he said, is 17 years. Doyle is a native of Washington.

The appointments which have been submitted to the Civil Service Commission also included Frances S. Tucker as cashier; Virginia A. Noble, secretary and stenographer to the director; Helen K. Keane, stenographer; Jamie Thomas, file clerk, and James S. Carmody, messenger.

Elwood Seal, assistant corporation counsel, is being considered for appointment as the commission's chief attorney, it was learned. The post pays $5,600 a year.

Friends of Seal, meanwhile, are seeking to have him named corporation counsel to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement at the end of this month of E. Barrett Prettyman. Action on the commission appointment is being held up pending the outcome of these efforts.

HUNDREDS OF FINE BOOKS
Including Nation-Wide Best Sellers
AT THESE LOW PRICES

THESE are not publishers' left-over stocks. Not books that did not sell. These are Nation-wide best sellers originally published at $2.50, $5, $6.50, $10.50 and up. NOW they are only $1, $1.29, $1.39, $1.47, $1.69—none higher than $1.98. Prices have been brought down to one-half, one-fifth and, in some cases, lower than the cost of the original higher-priced editions.

YES, but how is this possible? you ask. Because the publisher, one of America's foremost, printed an immense number—and in many cases made ONE volume of books formerly bound in two or even three volumes (but without changing or cutting a SINGLE WORD of text) using EXACTLY the same plates used in the original higher-priced editions. That is why you can now get "Stories of the Great Operas and Their Composers" (originally $10.50 in three volumes) for only $1.47; H. G. Wells' world famous "Outline of History" (originally $5) for $1.29; "The Garden Month by Month" (originally $7.50) for only $1.98. And these are only a few of the many splendid book values listed below.

YOU ARE certain to find something of interest in this vast variety of books which we have carefully selected to appeal to all tastes and all purses. Here are some of the classifications: FICTION, BIOGRAPHY, MYSTERY AND TERROR, TRAVEL, MUSIC, SCIENCE, ART, BOOKS FOR YOUNGSTERS, GARDENING, COOKING, BUSINESS AND FINANCE.

The books listed in this advertisement are all full library size, ranging from 5½x8¼ to 8¾x11¼ inches. Many of them contain 500 or 600 pages—some over 1,000 pages. Gorgeously illustrated with drawings, paintings in full color; sturdily and luxuriously bound, gold-stamped and printed in CLEAR TYPE on fine paper. # Nazi Official In Paris Asking 'Truce,' Report

Financier Wants France to Drop Sanction Demand; Schacht Worried.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 13.—A German financial official, a usually reliable source said tonight, is in Paris seeking to persuade France to drop her demand for sanctions against Germany because of the re-militarization of the Rhineland.

Emil George von Stauss, third vice president of the Reichstag and director of the Deutsche Bank, was said to be here as the confidential emissary of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, German minister of economics and Reichsbank president.

This source said the emissary warned Georges Bonnet, French Minister of Commerce, and leading Paris bankers that huge amounts of French capital invested in Germany would disappear if there were a financial collapse in the Reich.

Von Strauss was quoted as saying Dr. Schacht submitted a memorandum to Adolf Hitler 15 days ago warning him against violating the Locarno treaty and pointing out that "ruinous sanctions" were likely to follow.

Schacht, Von Stauss was said to have told the French leaders, promised to "work on" Hitler to have him withdraw the soldiers from the Rhineland if France drops her demand for sanctions.

The emissary was reported to have said Schacht is convinced that sanctions would lead to the "economic and political ruin of Nazi Germany."

A number of suggestions were dispatched to the French delegation in London tonight after Premier Albert Sarraut called in former Premier Edouard Herriot for a conference on a means of breaking the Franco-German deadlock.

After an hour's talk between them the premier summoned Alexis Leger, permanent secretary of the foreign office, and told him to submit the suggestions to the delegation at the Locarno talks.

The nature of the suggestions was not disclosed, although in some quarters it was said Herriot cautioned a "more realistic stand" instead of holding out stubbornly for full Nazi evacuation of the Rhineland.

"We must see clearly the difference between firmness and imprudence," said the veteran Herriot on leaving the meeting.

The uncertainty of British aid, as demonstrated during the past week, was cited today by Francois Pietri, Minister of the Navy, as a warning that France must have a more powerful fleet.

He made this statement before the Senate Naval Committee in urging that legislation building up the nation's sea power be passed immediately.

The Senate without a dissent approved a bill from the Chamber of Deputies increasing the period conscript military service from one year to two years.

Conscripts have already begun serving two years under a governmental decree. The increase in time was needed, among other things, because of the "lean years" of war babies—youths born during the World War days are now serving.

Gen. Louis Felix Maurin, minister of war, told the Senate "the government has decided to extend the period of military service. This is not an admission of weakness but a measure of precaution and sincerity."

Small squads of radio specialists and experts to handle sound detectors were sent to the frontier to complete the organization of the anti-air raids service.

Alsatians Harvest Grain, Ignore Rumors of War

Strasbourg, France, March 13 (AP).—Undisturbed by rumors of war, Alsatian peasants harvested wheat in their fields today above subterranean fortifications, where French troops labored to bring military equipment to near-perfect condition.

"Only Nazi thunder" was the peasant reaction to Adolf Hitler's speech at Karlsruhe yesterday in which the Reichsfuehrer reaffirmed Nazi sovereignty in the Rhineland.

Only 30,000 Soldiers Now Patrol Area as Compared With 150,000 Before War; Garrisons 'Are There to Stay.'

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Berlin, March 13.—German troops maneuvered in the Rhineland today in blunt official refutation of reports abroad that some of the gray-clad forces were moving out to ease international tension. There are 30,000 troops in the Rhineland, including 11,000 garrison police incorporated into the regular army, and they will stay there, a propaganda ministry spokesman stated.

He declined to comment on London reports that the German general staff is uneasy and fearful that France will invade the Rhineland.

Before the World War, officials pointed out while reiterating the occupation is symbolic only, Germany stationed 150,000 armed men on the Rhine.

They denied troops were leaving the Rhineland from Cologne.

"Troops seen near Cologne were engaged in maneuvers," an official said. "Germany will not withdraw any troops from the Rhine. But she will not increase her forces or move nearer the Franco-Belgian frontiers on condition that France and Belgium behave similarly."

On the diplomatic side Germany faced decision as to whether to sacrifice her much-vaunted national pride to political expediency, whether to withdraw indignantly into her shell or leave the door open for further international negotiation.

Many Germans now doubt that Germany will return to the League, as Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler suggested a week ago when he scuttled the Locarno Pact. But they are anxious to avoid League action which would leave them in isolation.

While Germans studied the Karlsruhe speech last night of Adolf Hitler, the embassy here of one of the Locarno members indicated it expected the Locarno nations to send Germany a final urgent appeal to withdraw her troops from the Rhineland.

This source suggested the appeal would be in the form of a virtual ultimatum.

Although foreign comments on sanctions were cited for the obvious reason of reassuring people of the Reich, the German editorials, on the other hand, seemed to foreign observers to have been written with the idea in mind that foreign embassies and legations and news correspondents would read and possibly report them back home.

With one accord, the press hailed Hitler's speech as a historical deed of the first magnitude. "It was the voice of a tremendous one carrying across the Rhine—the voice of the only man living who could endow it with words that count," said Nachtausgabe.

"All real friends of peace in the world are happy that Germany spoke once more in this manner," said the Mittag-Zeitung. "We now yield the floor to others."

The Frankfurter Zietung, as the daily now most widely read abroad, devoted two columns of its front page to an editorial entitled, "The Boomerang of Sanctions."

"Misuse of the word sanctions can entail undreamed consequences," the paper asserted. "It might well mean that the creators of the instrument of sanctions, who perhaps meant well, actually brought forth evil. For this reason efforts now going on appear to be doubly dangerous and flippant—it is palying with fire."

Th newspaper contended returning world recovery was abruptly ended by sanctions against Italy and "there are statesmen who want to propose sanctions against Germany. * * * If sanctions against Italy have meant disruption of world economic relations, sanctions against Germany would be tantamount to their complete destruction.

situation, as states not directly affected or remote from the scene of the quarrel, like Latin-American members, are likely to contribute materially to conciliation.

Latin-American members were said particularly to be influenced by Germany's promise to return to the League, thereby becoming pledged to obey international rules of the League and to refrain from overt aggression at the risk of being punished like Italy.

League officials said France's dogged belief in the effectiveness of collective security as represented by the League prevented quick French military action in the Rhineland as soon as Hitler's troops marched.

The first French plan was for immediate single-handed action by marching into the demilitarized zone, it was said. Advocates of this drastic plan were overruled by members of the government, who insisted upon giving collective security its chance.

A communique issued after today's Locarno meeting said:

"A small committee of ministers representing the signatory powers of the Locarno treaty continued during the day its examination of the situation.

"As the discussion proceeded, it was noted with satisfaction that a closer approximation of views had come apparent.

"The next meeting of the committee will take place at 5 p. m. tomorrow."

Italy was said to feel that since Britain, with the consent of France, led in application of sanctions against her because of the African war, "no British or French statesmen can now go to Italy and ask the Italian people to fight for them in any eventuality whatsoever."

Ambassador Von Hoesch remained at the foreign office only a short time and was noncommittal when he left. There were unconfirmed reports he had been given a written request by the four Locarno powers that Hitler make a conciliatory move.

Shortly after Von Hoesch entered the foreign office he was followed by Dr. Joseph A. C. Aveno, secretary general of the League, and Nicholas Titulescu, foreign minister of Rumania; then a few minutes later Flandin, Joseph Paul-Boncour, of France, who arrived in London today, and Ambassador Dino Grandi, of Italy, entered the building.

The Foreign Office made it clear that the communique's reference to "a closer approximation of views" concerned only the stands of the four Locarno powers and that the gulf separating them from Germany apparently is still as wide as ever.

Announcement that Flandin would return to Paris next week to consult the French cabinet caused surprise, inasmuch as Joseph Paul-Boncour, minister of state, arrived only today with the latest views of the government.

Both Flandin and Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, are understood to be clearly aware of the "danger" of a weak and vacillating policy toward Hitler because they believe he needs but little encouragement to advance into Memel, Danzig and Austria.

Trade With U.S. Protects Reich From Sanctions

French Experts Worried by This Country's Absence From the League.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

London, March 13.—United States absence from the League of Nations today gravely worried French financial experts wrestling with the problem of applying proposed sanctions against Germany.

After spending the day studying the effect of possible economic and financial sanctions against Germany, the experts concluded that, as with the case of sanctions against Italy, the United States holds the key to the locking up of the Reich with embargoes.

The United States ranks high as the source of raw materials for Germany, despite serious reductions in imports during the last two years.

French experts found the United States is selling Germany approximately $97,128,000 worth of goods annually, while buying $68,799,000 worth. They believe that in event of sanctions Germany could buy in the United States practically everything she now is purchasing in Europe.

If air-tight sanctions were applied, however, Germany would be critically hampered. Germany now enjoys a favorable trade balance with Great Britain of $48,564,000, $182,115,000 with Belgium, $242,820,000 with France and $218,538,000 with Italy.

If German trade with Great Britain, Belgium, Italy and France is halted the $687,990,000 balance which now provides Germany with the majority of her devisen (foreign exchange) would be eliminated.

Experts figure that even by scraping together all her gold resources Germany would be unable to raise more than $60,705,000, of which the Reichsbank holds $35,613,000.

The remainder is in other banks. Some of it would be difficult to acquire quickly.

Extortion Attempt Is Admitted by 3

Three men charged with attempting to extort $1,000 from James C. Davis, 219 H street northwest, Union Market commission merchant, pleaded guilty and were held for the grand jury, when arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Needham C. Turnage, yesterday.

Erwin E. Loeffler, 32, of 102 Thirteenth street northeast, who, according to police, admitted writing an extortion note to Davis, was placed on $1,500 bond. Oscar C. Kirby, 28, of 111 Fifth street southeast, and Hazel Vivian Swink, 23, of 220 E street northwest, his companions, were placed on $1,000 each.

They failed to make the bond and were ordered held in the District Jail.

The men were arrested Thursday by Detective Sergt. T. W. McVeary, when Kirby attempted to collect the money placed in a truck parked at Fifth and K streets northwest according to instructions left in the crudely penciled note.

A Developing Scandal.

The agents employed by Administrator Hopkins to inquire into his methods of administering work relief in West Virginia absolve the WPA from "playing politics with human misery." But they have not succeeded in silencing the vociferous Senator Holt, who maintains that a probe of the WPA by the WPA is "like sending Baby Face Nelson to investigate John Dillinger."

The public has a strong suspicion that there is a good deal of pot and kettle in the Holt-Hopkins feud. Apparently the West Virginia Senator didn't get very excited about the situation as long as his brother was a WPA official in good standing. And the departure of Mr. Holt's brother is appositely followed by the resignation of Mr. Hopkins' sister from a totally superfluous, NYA job in New York State.

So what Rush and Harry say about each other doesn't much matter. It's a gaudy side show. The real issue is the basic defects of the WPA. And that, we are proud to say, The Post has emphasized since the first appearance of the atrocious legislation which eventually gave birth to this truly incredible organization.

Every intelligent person knows that it is, particularly under Mr. Farley's regime, impossible to keep an organization like the WPA free from the taint of politics. A huge, inefficient, befuddled Federal agency sprawling over the entire United States, employing people without regard to Civil Service rules and regulations, and spending immense sums without subjection to adequate checks, attracts grafters as flies are drawn to sugar. It is like cleansing the Augean stables to try to keep this organization clean from Washington.

In the highly improbable event that an unbiased investigation would justify Mr. Hopkins' pathetic faith in the political purity of his organization, he would still be confronted by unanswerable charges of excessive cost and blundering administration. He would still have to explain why he has made such inadequate use of the National Resources Committee in selecting projects, and of the Federal Employment Service in developing non-political placement machinery.

An inquiry into such fundamental aspects of WPA operations would do a great deal more good than a fruitless pursuit of the grafters, big and little, for which the whole WPA is nothing but an incubator. What the country needs, in addition to a good 5-cent cigar for Senator Holt, is a searching probe that would disclose the wastes inherent in the present relief system. The necessity of fundamental reform must be made plain before more billions are thrown down the WPA sewer.

Mr. Richards' Retirement.

Local government in which the people have no voice in tolerable only when operated by men of unquestioned principle and integrity. As a general rule even the most competent administrators cannot satisfactorily take the place of public servants in some degree responsible to the people. But in the case of the disfranchised District the criterion of successful administration is almost solely the character of the men appointed to key offices.

The community cannot avoid a sense of loss, therefore, upon the retirement of William P. Richards as District assessor. During his 44 years in the service of the local government Mr. Richards rigidly avoided the pitfalls which beset the path of even the most conscientious public servants. His uncompromising manner in enforcement of the law has brought him criticism from some property owners. But he leaves an office which is the center of graft in many cities with the highest respect, after 27 years of continuous service.

It is such devotion to official duty which has kept some aspects of the District government on a relatively high plane of efficiency, in spite of its numerous handicaps. Under Mr. Richards' direction the routine work of assessing property for taxation purposes became a science. He gave to the local government the full benefit of an intimate knowledge in this field. To the first essential qualification of a good public servant—integrity—he added intelligence and determination.

While the District is struggling to bring about a more effective local government, it is well to remember that some departments of the present system have functioned smoothly under tremendous difficulties largely because of the self-sacrificing services of such men as the retiring assessor.

The Breathing Spell.

Friday the thirteenth passed without any increase, though also without diminution, of the European crisis and today the League Council will formally take control of the situation arising from Germany's open violation of the Locarno treaties. In the 90 sessions, routine and emergency, which it has held since 1920, many vital issues have come before the Council. None of them has been more difficult of solution than the present case.

One striking consequence of the mere existence of regularized League procedure is already clear. No nation, other than Germany, has in six tense days taken any action to increase the difficulties. There have been no ultimatums or commitments of national policy which could in any way jeopardize the collective judgment the Council is now expected to formulate. Here is a most significant contrast with the situation in July, 1914, when the total absence of peace machinery encouraged each of the great European nations to strike first and reflect afterward.

This invaluable breathing spell is of course serving to clarify the minimum national demands of the various powers. France, Belgium and Russia, backed by the Little Entente, will obviously resist any formula of peaceful solution which does not carry most definite and tangible pledges from Germany. For this attitude none can blame them. Great Britain feels as strongly on the necessity of effective guarantees from Germany, but balances her thesis with the consideration that, in fact, Germany has so far only sent troops into her own territory. By stressing this moral aspect of the case the British hope, if Hitler is not hopelessly recalcitrant, to secure a formula of reasonable settlement.

It is in the Italian position that much of the difficulties concentrate. That power, itself an aggressor and defined treaty violator, is for that reason unable to join the front against Germany. And the mere establishment of such a front would, indeed, tend to create a common cause for Italy, Germany and—in the background—Japan. It is on this, of course, that Hitler counts heavily. Without the Italian invasion of Ethiopia there would probably have been no military occupation of the Rhineland.

To state the problem, even in barest outline, is very far from indicating any avenue of solution. And to find that avenue will tax to the utmost both the ingenuity of the Council and the constructive diplomacy of the individual powers. The outlook is far from promising. But it is a very great gain that at least an opportunity—thanks to the League machinery—is afforded for human ingenuity and good will to function in time of crisis in behalf of peace.

The District Boundary Muddle

No one who has studied the report of the District-Virginia Boundary Commission from an independent viewpoint will be surprised that the House Judiciary Committee has pigeonholed it. The Virginia Legislature hastened to ratify the report because it was so overwhelmingly favorable to that State as to arouse no controversy. But Congress could not accept it without relinquishing valuable property rights as well as jurisdiction over important areas that seem to lie clearly within the legal bounds of the District.

Even if the committee had been disposed to accept the findings of the commission, further work would have been necessary to establish an actual boundary. The recommendations of the investigators are so vague that they have been variously interpreted. As ratified at Richmond the report might mean something different from the interpretation placed upon it by Congress. The only safe place for a document of this sort is a dusty niche such as that to which the Judiciary Committee has confined it.

Merely to discard a sloppy report, however, is a far cry from the establishment of an equitable boundary line on the southern shore of the Potomac. Members of the Judiciary Committee seem to favor settlement of this intricate dispute in the Supreme Court. Certainly that would be a logical sequence to the failure of the Boundary Commission. But no effort to adjudicate this dispute is likely to arise from Congressional inaction. To avoid further delay and useless controversy Congress might well pass a joint resolution authorizing the Attorney General to enter suit against the State of Virginia to quiet title to the land in question.

A suit of more limited scope, involving title to land in Roaches Run alleged to have been illegally patented to private individuals by Virginia in 1927, is now pending in the District Supreme Court. In recent months the case has not been pressed because the boundary dispute which it involves was believed to be on the way to settlement. Now that the report has been sidetracked the Department of Justice might well go forward with this case. If it reaches the Supreme Court of the United States, and that body follows its own precedents, a considerable section of the boundary will thus be established at the high-water mark on the south shore of the Potomac as it existed in 1791.

Final adjudication of this case against private patent holders would not, of course, terminate the larger controversy. But it would point the way to a proper settlement. In the absence of a direct legal contest between the Government and Virginia, pressure of this suit seems to be the most hopeful prospect of lifting the issue out of the fog in which the Boundary Commission enveloped it.

Revenue Or Tax Reform?

It is becoming increasingly apparent that the House Ways and Means Committee is impaled upon the horns of a dilemma. If the committee modifies the Administration's proposed tax upon corporate surpluses in order to exempt banks and fiduciary institutions and encourage the retention of so-called "depression" reserves, it is doubtful whether much if any additional revenue will be secured. On the other hand, if a serious attempt is made to add $620,000,000 to total revenues by substituting taxes on undivided earnings for the existing corporation taxes, heavy inroads will have to be made upon reserves. In short, the committee is facing the difficult task of trying to combine a reform of corporate taxation with a program of taxation for revenue.

Simplification of our existing system of taxing corporations is undoubtedly needed. Strong arguments can also be advanced in favor of taxing corporate income after it has been disbursed in the form of dividends instead of levying a tax upon the net profits of a corporation as an independent entity. Much can be said, too, in support of a tax program designed to prevent the accumulation of unwieldy corporate surpluses, in excess of amounts needed to supply a cushion in times of depression and finance moderate capital requirements. However, such reforms should be planned most carefully with regard for their long-time social and economic effects, instead of with an eye to current revenue.

A sub-committee of the House Ways and Means Committee has tentatively agreed to impose a tax on corporate surplus graduated according to the percentage of new earnings undistributed. That is, if only a small percentage of the corporate income is held, the tax rate would be low—15 per cent on the first 10 per cent of undistributed net income, rising to 55 per cent on more than 30 per cent of undistributed net profits.

In principle this is a much better method of graduation than one varying with the absolute amounts of corporate surpluses, which would put especially heavy pressure upon large companies. In practice, too, the proposed rates would be moderate if the retained income did not exceed 20 per cent. The rates become oppressive, however, as the percentage mounts, and would probably force distribution of surpluses that might be greatly needed in the business affected.

The moral seems to be: Don't mix tax reform with taxes for revenue. This is an instance in which the two objectives are not compatible.

In Pursuit Of Justice.

Gov. Hoffman's decision to grant further reprieve to Bruno Richard Hauptmann confirms the belief that his only interest in the case is to make certain that justice is done. When the first stay of execution was granted there was some hope, slender though it may have been, that the man convicted as slayer of the Lindbergh baby might be induced to tell what he probably knows about the crime. But the prisoner seems to have offered no co-operation whatever. There remains no reason for again preventing the law from taking its course.

Many people in New Jersey seem to have turned against Gov. Hoffman because of his efforts to clear up every vestige of doubt as to Hauptmann's guilt. But against that he has the satisfaction of knowing that his conscience is clear. For he has made a diligent effort to solve some of the remaining mysteries of the Lindbergh case, to bring within the grip of the law others who may be implicated and to give the prisoner every possible opportunity to throw more light upon the crime.

Thoughtful citizens who are more interested in the higher concept of justice than in social vengeance upon an individual will find much to commend in the Governor's courageous handling of this case. Nothing has been lost by the delay resulting from his investigation. On the contrary, much of the skepticism as to the wisdom of the verdict and the odium of the Flemington trial have been dissipated thereby.

Why keep picking on Al Smith because he plans to "take a walk" during the Presidential campaign? He knows his limitations: he has tried running.

A Man's Best Years.

From the Newark News.

An Ohio psychologist, Dr. Harvey C. Lehman, after much research, has come to the conclusion that the age of 41 years is the high spot in production for writers and that poets are at their best around 35. Other specialists are in proportion, with the usual exceptions, of course.

Speaking of late bloomers in literature and the arts generally, how about William De Morgan? Up to a gracious maturity of 65 years he was interested in decoration, with emphasis on pottery and tiles. Then he burst out with "Joseph Vance," not a negligible novel, and within five years had turned out three or four more that made prewar readers in England and America do a lot of new reading. There was Mark Twain, who did some of his best work after 50. Think of Hugo and Dickens! How about Joseph Conrad? He was a sea captain when he turned to writing fiction and not by any means in his first youth when he started; when he died at 67 he was famous, with a lot of good books to his credit and still more in his inexhaustible mind. Was he at his peak? The general impression seems to be he was. Howells wrote his greatest novel at 48.

Inflation By Another Name.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Contrary to what you state, Father Coughlin's taunts did not sting the victims of his barbed shafts to action. They were very active previous to the courageous denunciation by Father Coughlin. Representative Boland was accused on the floor of influencing other members to retire their names from the petition; and Father Coughlin read a telegram in which a Congressman declared how he was approached by Representative O'Connor, under the Presidential shadow, to do the same retreat.

Yes, they can bring the bill to a vote. They may find about 120 for and the rest of them against it. It will denounce the professional politicians. It will prove that democracy is pretty dead, when the leaders of a Democratic Party have fought so bravely to stop even the discussion of a bill.

"It is especially encouraging to find that responsible members of the House are now prepared to welcome a test that might once have been dangerous." That is the wrong impression. The inflationary sentiment is not waning. First of all there is no inflation in it; only the pumping of a necessary poundage in a flat tire.

The whole story surely evidences that many are under the whip and as regular rubber-stampers will yield to the cracking whip of an undemocratic commandeering.

But not a vote, not a whip can silence the public opinion aroused with the issue; and before I sign off, please omit references to demagoguery until you prove he is a quack; because for many he is a fearless leader; while many others are slaves of an unpopular and dictatorial fancy with the inspiration and support of the money-controllers. ### The Doctor's Responsibility.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with interest your editorial, "It Is Outrageous," in protest against inadequate funds for the local public health service.

I was particularly interested in your statement that "Washington's death rate was 17.2 per 1,000 in 1935, compared with 11.4 for the country as a whole. The tuberculosis death rate in Washington is 123 per 100,000, compared with 56.6 for the entire United States."

In view of these appalling statistics I quite agree that there is most urgent need for increased funds for the Health Department and the care of the indigent sick.

I disagree, however, with your statement that "This disgraceful situation in the 'privileged' Capital is demonstrably a result of inadequate public health appropriations."

Tragic experience which resulted recently in the death from pulmonary tuberculosis of my beloved husband has convinced me that the appalling health problem in this city could never be solved by funds alone, though unlimited funds were available. The underlying reason for the deplorable situation must be tackled at its source, and that source is the incompetent and unscrupulous members of the medical profession who fail to give their patients the time and study necessary to prevent minor ailments from developing into serious illness and death. A thorough housecleaning of the medical profession is, therefore, the only thing which can possibly materially reduce the abnormally high sickness and death rate here.

My husband had been under medical care in this city constantly for three years. He consulted only physicians of highest reputation and standing and cancelled checks show that he paid many hundreds of dollars for medical care. Notwithstanding his very ominous symptoms and his distressingly emaciated and pitiable condition, however, no diagnosis of tuberculosis was ever made here. Finally, in desperation, he went to a private hospital in Florida, where his ailment was diagnosed as "bilateral pulmonary tuberculosis, chronic, far advanced," within a few hours after his arrival. This diagnosis was subsequently confirmed at a veterans hospital to which he was shortly thereafter transferred for treatment, and his death occurred just three weeks later.

Since no diagnosis of tuberculosis was ever made here, no precautions whatsoever were taken to prevent others from contracting it. To whom did he unwittingly transmit it? To members of his family, friends, associates, the "general public" in crowded street cars and in movies? Whose is the responsibility?

Until all physicians in this city are forced by an aroused public opinion (and I am convinced they will not do it until they are forced) to assume the moral and professional responsibilities which are theirs from the moment they accept a patient; until they are forced to deal capably and honorably with patients and to stop their financial bleeding of them for worthless "professional services," and until they are forced to be true to their professional oaths or forfeit their licenses to practice, until then tuberculosis and other communicable diseases will continue to stalk rich and poor alike, leaving in their wake a multitude of preventable deaths and a fearful toll of sickness or worse which is an inevitable cause of desolate homes, broken hearts and despair.

Coast Guard Orders.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I learn that orders have been issued, effective Monday, March 16, which will compel the Engineering Division of the U. S. Coast Guard to work from eight in the morning until six in the evening, for an indefinite number of months, without compensation for overtime, either in the form of cash or additional leave.

The fundamental basis of practically all New Deal legislation has been to provide employment through the shortening of working hours. Surely this principle should be applied to Government workers first of all. There are undoubtedly many engineers and clerical workers who would be grateful for even a temporary appointment to this division, until the pressure of work has abated sufficiently to permit normal hours for the regular staff.

If the work is of such nature that temporary employes cannot be successfully utilized, then surely some additional compensation should be given to the employes of this division who are ordered to work ten hours a day. It is my understanding that certain new legislation makes additional pay, or the granting of extra leave, a matter of law, but apparently a law which these employes have no power to enforce. M. P ENTSLER.

Edison On Competition.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In one of his recent Sunday evening radio talks, Mr. W. J. Cameron quoted the following significant observation of Thomas A. Edison in reference to natural law. Writing to Prof. William D. Marks, he said, "Dear Marks: To my mind the raising of the price from ¾ to 1 cent per lamp hour is a bid for competition. I am a believer in insuring the permanency of an investment by keeping prices so low that there is no inducement to others to come in and ruin it. There seems to be a law in commercial things as in nature. If one attempts to obtain more profit than general average he is immediately punished by competition."

In the above observation Mr. Edison revealed a perception of that natural law which rules the business world quite as much as does any other law in any other part of the universe. It upholds the democratic position in regard to the beneficient influence of competition and by the same reasoning condemns State socialism for its repudiation of all natural law.

Lottery In Washington.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An attempt is being made right here in this city to muster up support of church people on behalf of a gambling scheme—a lottery, in fact. Needless to say, an attempt of this kind is looked upon with grave misgivings by the right thinking people of Washington.

It calls for a revival of the crusading spirit of our ancestors—a call to arms against the encroachment of the Evil One. This influence is seen in a thousand ways, the disregard for the law, the prevailing tone of the movies, the nudism exhibited on the covers of the books and magazines that we see on the newsstands. Even calendars and advertisements displayed in some business houses are not above reproach.

We are indeed living in a time to try men's souls, when unity among all right-thinking people is so very desirable, if we are to overcome the forces of evil. If we fail in our duty, then indeed may we repeat the words of the Prophet Jehosaphat when he said, "The Temple has been defiled; the Treasure has been stolen."

Our immediate watchword is: "The church supports no gambling schemes." Let this be Washington's answer to New York City and the powers of corruption.

Senator Holt's Attack.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a native West Virginian, though for 25 years past a resident of Washington City, the sayings and doings of the junior Senator from my State concern me. The recent attack which the Senator made upon the administrator of the WPA funds, after an investigation which his own utterances brought upon West Virginia and Mr. Hopkins, does not smack of Senatorial prudence or fairness.

In this land of free speech we accord to any man (within obvious limits) the privelege of finding fault. If Senator Holt, after leniency and exceptional stretching of the intent of the law, permitted him to take his seat in the U. S. Senate, can turn against the man who was most influential in placing him there; if he can at 30 years of age stand on a Y. M. C. A. rostrum and in baldest terms denounce the Supreme Court of his country; if he can as an avowed follower and sympathizer of the Roosevelt Administration strike at the man who probably is as important and as helpful a man to the Administration as any member of the Administration's cabinet; if he can make trouble in a State that requires unanimity of sentiment to bring out its vote for the present Administration—then let the man who ventures this to satisfy his conscience, be sure of his motive, and furthermore let such a would-be reformer take whatever consequence may come of such a bold course.

I do not sit in judgment, but when the ousting of a brother from position in the WPA field of effort inspires the Senator to attack the whole West Virginia scheme and say that its work is as "crooked as a snake with the colic," the "d—d" which the Senator sends forth like a devouring bird of prey might return and light upon his own head. Such things have happened.

Thank You.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Not so long ago I received a letter from the widow of a cousin of mine who lives in Hendersonville, N. C. She is a well-known literary woman and lecturer; her father, Col. Ripley, having been one of the largest landowners in the country, and in re-reading her interesting letter, I noted as follows:

"I am now getting along in years, but sister (having passed her eighty-third birthday) and I live quietly but contentedly reading books and papers. The Washington Post is still my standby. It has been coming to our home for over 40 years. I really feel as though I could not keep house contentedly without it."

I am sending this to you because so many receive the "slings and arrows" and so few the "bouquets."

The Post Impressionist

"Either Caesar Or Nothing."

FORBES FOLLANSBEE is a firm believer in the proverb about what will happen to a dog if you give it a bad name, so he was trying to find a good one for his new collie, the sole survivor of a litter of 13. The mother had been a beautiful animal, pedigreed; but she will bear no more progeny: she died as a result of the operation that brought this pup to birth.

"Caesarian?" asked Eliot Storey—of our host.

Follansbee nodded.

"Male?" Storey persisted.

Follansbee nodded again.

"Why, then," said Storey, "it's perfectly simple. Everybody knows the Caesarian operation got its name because Julius Caesar was born that way. Your pup's name's predestined: it's 'Caesar'."

* * *

However, Ferdie Blake—who is both a doctor and a youth—declared: "Not at all."

Then we ourselves adventured a word—in our purely post-impressionistic capacity. Why, according to our recollection of the legend, those Roman surgeons even dragged Gaius Julius into existence from a mother already dead! The Caesarian operation wasn't performed on a living woman until 1500 A. D.

And Storey got down the Webster. He read, with rebuking gusto, its definition of the disputed term:

"So called because Julius Caesar is reported to have been so brought into the world."

Whereupon Storey demanded: "So now what?"

"The emphasis," unruffled Blake replied, "rests upon the word 'reported.' Well, the report referred to is a false report—that's all."

Blake belongs to the type of creature that, when contradicted, always reiterates his original declaration in stronger terms:

"In fact, the probability is that, far from Julius Caesar giving his name to Caesarian Section, the Caesarian Section gave its name to Julius Caesar—gave him his family name, I mean, by giving it to one of his remote ancestors.

"Haven't you men ever heard of the Couches?"

Follansbee asked if they were some new kind of operating table. Storey said the only Couch he knew was H. C. Couch, that distinguished utility expert, here in Washington, whose name is so honorably connected with the RFC.

"Well," said Blake, "I mean Dr. John Harold Couch, of the Toronto General Hospital, and Herbert Newell Couch—H. N., not H. C.—who is Assistant Professor of Greek at Brown University."

Blake always totes an argumentative gun to re-enforce his assertions. This time, when he drew, it took the form of the current issue of the Canadian Medical Association Journal. It was his turn to read, and therefrom he read us what the Couch brothers have to say.

"It is altogether probable," read Blake, "that some distant ancestor of his (Julius Caesar's) was born by means of a Caesarian operation, performed on a dead mother, and (that) the cognomen Caesar, which is derived from the verb caedo, to cut, was attached to the newborn child for that reason. (There was) another Roman family bearing the name of Caesar, (which) may have derived their cognomen from the same cause.

"Such a method of assigning names would be entirely in harmony with the early Roman traditions . . . Pliny is the authority for this assumption, for, in his Natural History, he remarks that . . . the first of the Caesars was said to have been born in this manner."

If Blake had imagined that this would end the debate, he was disappointed. Follansbee produced dusty tomes to demonstrate that, far from arising out of caedo, the name "Caesar" was of unknown origin. Storey looked for a set of the Elder Pliny's works, abused Follansbee because it wasn't on his shelves, and then reasoned:

"Even if your professor of Greek has correctly translated the Latin of Gaius Secundus, the Couch point isn't necessarily proved. Harold and Herbert assume that, by 'the first of the Caesars,' Pliny means the first of that family to bear that name. Had Pliny written before the name became synonymous with Imperator, there might have been some ground for such an assumption. But Julius was killed in 44 B. C., and Augustus reigned from B. C. 27 to A. D. 14. And then—Why, by the time Pliny (who lived from 23 to 79 A. D.) wrote his Historia Naturalis, everybody who used the term 'the first of the Caesars' meant 'the first post-Tarquin Dictator of Rome.' And that proves, not the Couch case, but the case for tradition!"

The debate ended? When the hour arrived for our arrival at this office, the combatants were still at it—and Follansbee's collie no nearer a name than when it started. We have no expectation of any agreement being reached before we next see Follansbee—and we're worried about that pup.

What ought he to be named, anyhow?

Joke On Mr. Brundage.

Paris, March 13.

DOUBTLESS it will be a great surprise to Mr. Avery Brundage, president of the American Amateur Athletic Union, to learn that those uniformed men whose swarming numbers obscured the sporting aspect of the Olympic games at Garmisch-Partenkirchen were soldiers, after all, and that they are now up on the Rhine waiting for war.

The Nazis had promised him that they would do nothing to foul the fine sporting spirit in which the games were approached by their guests from other countries, and when thousands of men in uniform appeared on the scene, most of them wearing tin hats and almost all carrying bayonets, an explanation was readily given.

Those were not soldiers but policemen and laborers, all except the Black Guards, whose name has one significance in Berlin but quite another in the English language. The Black Guards were neither policement nor laborers but the personal attendants of Adolf Hitler assigned to protect him with their lives. And the dazzle-painted army lorries which rumbled constantly through the streets loaded with men who seemed to be soldiers were not military transports but just some motor trucks which happened to be passing through.

THAT was the explanation which was given at Garmisch-Partenkirchen when the foreign tourists were stretching their necks and dancing on their toes trying to see past the uniformed ranks and catch an occasional squint at an athlete sliding down a hill on a sled or on a pair of glorified barrel staves.

And now it turns out that the Nazi government was playing a joke on Mr. Brundage and the athletic ambassadors of other nations, who accepted the explanation and went away believing they had seen the sporting program carried out in an atmosphere free of the taint of military and political ballyhoo. For the laborers and police and doubtless many personal bodyguards of Adolf Hitler and the uniformed poultry raisers with wings on their tunics have swung over the Rhine in the very same trucks which carried them through the streets of Garmisch-Partenkirchen less than a month ago, and if they aren't soldiers at least they are what the Nazis will use for fighting purposes when the war comes.

Your correspondent was a victim of the same deception that took in the believing Brundage, except in one particular. The exception was the corps of Black Guards, about two thousand strong, the double meaning of whose name always suggested itself when translated into the English language. The Nazis explained time and again they were not soldiers but personal bodyguards, and the explanations always left a lingering doubt, because there seemed to be no reason to assemble two thousand Black Guards to protect a man claiming to be the idol of his own people, and the athletes of the various nations had neither the mission nor the means with which to do him bodily harm.

NOW it appears that when a Black Guard has sufficiently proven those qualities which, translated into the English language, would be called blackguardism he is considered to be qualified for a commission as an officer in the Nazi army. Inasmuch as most of them possessed these qualifications in a high degree, it is logical to assume that many members of the corps are on the Rhine now waiting for war or will go there in due course.

There is something creepy about the word "war" now, because war has been brought so near to France and Paris overnight, and yet the appearance of the country and the city is so normal. You would expect that people who suddenly found themselves sitting right under guns again—or, more correctly, sitting right under German bombers—would have some particular appearance. They ought to stand around waving their arms or listening to street corner statesmen yelling from soap boxes.

But the French just have no appearance of people waiting for something to drop and do nothing which lends itself to the description at all. Taxis bray in the street, gendarmes bawl out drivers and spring weather brought out the long-distance sitters, who sit by the hour at the little round tables of the sidewalk cafes reading papers while their mud-colored coffee gets cold in glasses.

• • • •

THESE things are distinctly not in the role of people who say they will be blown up in a week. They haven't been this close to war since 1918, and if the British decide to go along with them in the courts which they have demanded the Germans will be over to blow them up.

Nevertheless, they are apparently honest about their demand that the British decide on war and will not thank them if they decided to hold back instead, thus averting war, for the time being at least.

It's a good thing for Brundage of the American Amateur Athletic Union that he was not present on the Rhine at the moment, for he would be sure to recognize among the army of occupation the same type of uniformed Nazis who were not soldiers at the Olympic games, but only cops, road workers and the personal attendants of the Fuehrer, with the special quality of blackguardism.

Our Stake In The Crisis

Another War Would Mean Collapse Of Civilization.

By Livingston Hartley.

THE capitals of the world today resound with talk of war. Italy is conducting a war in Africa, Japanese imperialism brings increasing danger of war in the Far East and the policy of Nazi Germany, with its feverish rearmament and progressive violation of treaty obligations, casts an ominous cloud over the future of Europe.

Premiers and Foreign Ministers of European nations have stated for more than a decade that another great war would destroy our civilization. Yet armaments multiply in every land, and even isolated America is appropriating nearly a billion dollars for national defense. Clearly, these are crucial times, when the relationship between war and the survival of our civilization can profitably be examined.

Two factors determine the destructiveness of modern war, industrialization and propinquity. Industrialization is essential for the creation of a modern war machine, mass artillery, chemical apparatus, air power and warships; it also affords the objectives against which a modern war machine can operate effectively.

In the Chaco war, since the combatants were not industrial states, their armies were unable to utilize either massed heavy artillery or large scale aerial bombardments against each other. Neither Paraguay nor Bolivia, moreover, contain great cities, industrial centers, and congested populations, the essential targets of modern war. The Ethiopian conflict has shown that the most powerful military machine ever employed in Africa has been relatively ineffective against an enemy with a primitive economy.

Industrialization, moreover, creates an artificial national economy in which groups of citizens cannot live solely by their own efforts. Communications become vital to the food supply of congested cities and to the functioning of industry itself. City populations are threatened with death if their communications with the surrounding country or their supply of food, water and power are interrupted. Some industrial nations in Europe are as vulnerable as cities. They cannot live if their communications with the outside world are destroyed.

PROPINQUITY is another important factor in modern war, since it determines the relative amount of destruction the combatants can wreck upon each other. The devastation of air attack and military operations is limited only by the distance which separates the industrial and urban centers of the belligerents.

If the destructiveness of war is relative in different regions of the world, as is the civilization which war endangers. Our modern civilization is white, not yellow, black or brown. Its vital centers lie in Europe and the United States, the heart of modern world economy, industry, trade, prosperity and progress. For this reason, the collapse of order and government in South America, Africa, India or the Far East would inflict only a relative damage on world civilization as a whole.

The effect of war in the Far East on civilization would be limited by several factors. Geography makes Japan the only nation whose vital centers would be exposed to serious devastation in such a conflict, and even a complete breakdown of Japanese economic and social life could only inflict indirect damage on the western world. Some observers would even take the view that a collapse of Japan would benefit rather than harm the larger interests of the great white nations.

Distance would protect the United States or a western European power from any vital blow to its national life in a Far Eastern war. Neither New York, Chicago, London nor Paris need fear attack by the Japanese navy or air force. Distance would also safeguard the heart of Russia against hostile action in such a war, since the industrial and urban centers exposed to attack in eastern Siberia are of only minor importance to the national existence of the U. S. S. R.

• • • •

THE factors which mitigate the destructive effect of war in the Far East or other regions of the world do not exist in Europe, where industrialization and propinquity create a very different situation. The capitals of the European powers are all within a few hours' bombing range of each other. Another great war in Europe would bring millions of men into intensive short range conflict as in 1914, in which the mighty European war machines would find scores of nearby congested targets to destroy. Europe, moreover, has an artificial industrial civilization which depends upon the smooth operation of a complex economic mechanism to keep its inhabitants supplied with food and the necessities of life.

The menace of war to European civilization has been multiplied many times by the airplane. This fact is realized by European peoples, whose homes and children lie in easy range of potential enemies. Furthermore, the experience of the World War, the privations which have followed it, and the ever-present dread of a new conflagration, have weakened the old morale and stability of European society.

Regarded objectively, it seems highly probable that another great war between rival alliances in Europe would end in a complete breakdown of European civilization. The speeches of statesmen of almost every European nation indicate that they have reached this conclusion.

EASY TARGETS.

NO one can predict where such a European breakdown would lead, whether to a federation of communist states, to general chaos followed by a partial comeback along present lines, or to the complete supremacy on the shattered Continent of a single power. The disaster could not, however, entail total collapse of world civilization such as followed the fall of Rome, since the United States remains a center of sanity and stability, protected from the fate of Europe by the broad expanse of the Atlantic Ocean.

But the effect of such a European collapse on the United States would extend far beyond the loss of some 60 per cent of our exports. We should find ourselves at once in a new world position, saddled with world responsibilities which we could not dodge.

We alone would have to cope with the Japanese expansion in the Far East which would coincide with or follow a great war in Europe. We might have to undertake the protection of Australia, New Zealand and the Dutch East Indies against absorption by Japan. Our isolation days would be over, and we should have to get into world politics with both feet, perhaps even seeking alliances to safeguard our national interests.

If a new European war ended in the destruction of Great Britain as a first-class power, we should find ourselves in an exposed position on the Atlantic as well as the Pacific. The British navy would no longer lie between us and Europe, and by its existence and the political realities it represents, allow us to keep our battle fleet in the Pacific.

• • • •

IF the outcome of the war were a Germanized Europe, we should face a challenge on our east flank at the time we were forced to meet one on our west. Stalemate and chaos in Europe might bring the same result, through the creation of a communist federation inherently hostile to this country as the last great stronghold of white capitalism.

The frontier of democracy is today on the Rhine, and the frontier of capitalism in Poland. Since the frontier of America is the Atlantic, 4,000 miles from danger, we can now afford to practice isolation. Should these two European frontiers collapse and coalesce on our own, we would quickly know the European urge to achieve security.

If we visualize the possible results to ourselves of another great European war, we find that we have infinitely more than a mere economic interest in Europe. The success of collective security as a guarantee against war in Europe becomes an American interest. The success of democracy in keeping the Atlantic states of Europe free becomes an American interest. The stability of the British empire, as a screen between us and Europe, and as a natural ally in the Far East, becomes an American interest.

These American interests are now being protected by the action of other nations alone. Common sense indicates that we should make some practical effort to protect these interests ourselves.

When a pact is but a gesture
And a treaty's just a jest—

And does that which suits it best;
When a solemn, sacred treaty
Is a thing no land will keep,
Then the world of man must totter
While the gods above us weep.

And the covenants at will
Can be torn to bits of paper
To the notes of laughter shrill;
When the main chance only guides us
And agreements are but trash,
Brace yourself for heavy going—
We are heading for a crash!

When the Hitlers scoff at honor
And the Adolfs jeer at faith,
When the idiotic goose step
Summons up an ancient wraith;
When no signature is binding
And a pledge is hardly read,
Get yourself all set for trouble—
Dark disaster's just ahead!

IV.

When a pledge can be abandoned
If it does not seem so good;
When the code can be discarded
When a despot thinks it should;
When the rules must all be broken
Or the players will not play,
Hie thee to the cyclone cellar,
For a blow is on the way!

Stanton Appointed District FHA Head

J. Reilly Stanton, of 3927 Morrison street northwest, yesterday was appointed director of the Federal Housing Administration for the District, taking over the position formerly held by Henry Rowland.

Stanton has been with the Federal Housing Administration since January, 1935, when he started work as a field representative. Previous to the appointment yesterday, he had been special assistant to the local director.

Stanton, who is 46, is a member of a family that for more than a hundred years has been active in Georgetown banking and real estate. His father, Thomas J. Stanton, who died three years ago, was a Georgetown real estate dealer and for over a decade a director of Riggs National Bank.

After attending Georgetown University, Stanton engaged in sales promotion work. He returned to Washington in 1927 as agent for a building-supply manufacturer.

Stanton is married and has one daughter, Mary Jane, 15.

Numbers Game

By Karl Schriftgiesser

Dorothy Picks A Lemon.

OUR maid Dorothy—she whose tri-weekly dusting makes me a part-time member of the Morgan "leisure class"—plays the numbers. In all other respects she is a model citizen. She sings in the church choir, plays bridge, and will not work on Sunday, because "it isn't right." The other day my infant was emulating her father's method of adding up an expense account, and for no particular reason said, "One, five, nine."

Dorothy at once disappeared to the telephone, and a few minutes later I gathered, from what I overheard, that she was playing the numbers, and the number was "159." Numbers, of course, is an old Washington pastime. Peggy O'Neil, of Jacksonian fame, played them, and once won handsomely enough to purchase herself a slave, according to at least one historian. So I didn't interfere. Curiosity got the better of me, though, and I questioned Dorothy. She sent me to a very wise man, and he told me of the ways that those who take their numbers game seriously select the figures on which they bet their pennies, dimes and quarters.

IT occurred to me that perhaps these systems might be passed along. Not, of course, that I want to be considered an aider and abettor of the numbers "racket," but merely as an exercise in the psychology of superstition. (I don't believe in numbers, myself. It cost me 50 cents to find out that Dorothy picked a lemon with the number 159.)

"Yes, sir," said my mentor, "numbers are funny things. There are lots of ways to pick them. Take yesterday, for instance. It was Friday, the thirteenth of March. March is, of course, the third month. So your number for that day would be 313. That's the commonest method. But there are others.

"Another easy way is the license plate system. Drivers who have six numbers on their plates are all set for six days. They play the first three numbers on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and the last three on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday."

The dream method, though, is one of the most popular. In order to play this right, you select the most comfortable chair in the house, just 10 minutes before going to bed. Then you begin counting. First you just count 1, 2, 3, and then you begin jumbling them up a bit, counting like this, 39, 47, 190, 137, and so forth, until your 10 minutes is up. Then you hop into bed, and you are sure to have a dream in which the lucky number will appear. If you don't dream a number, then you consult your book on numerology, and find out what number the particular dream you did have signifies.

MY mentor said that he particularly liked the "soap and ear method" best.

"This way, you wash your ears good, every morning. Then you ride to work on the bus or street car, and you keep your ears wide open. You'll get a number sooner or later. Generally I gets mine from some lady sitting there, talking about bargains she sees in the ads. When she says, 'And, my dear, do you know they are only $2.98 a pair,' then I've got it. Two ninety-eight is my number for the day."

Some people take their numbers so seriously they even pick the figure in the text, or the day's lesson read in church. These numbers are supposed to be particularly lucky.

In certain districts of the town, I am told, enterprising "business men" have circulars printed, and in the center of each is a number in big, black type. Each circular has a number ranging from 000-999. If 20,000 circulars are printed, somewhere in the group are 20 winning numbers. There is one winner for each 1,000 printed. If the circular is put out daily for a week, and if every one plays his or her number, at the end of the week there will be 120 winners.

"I think dreaming in just as sure," said my informant.

• • • •

OTHER ways of selecting numbers are from the serial numbers on watches and auto engines, street car numbers, phone numbers, the weights of contestants in boxing or wrestling matches, and even the weight of your mother-in-law.

"The elevator way is good, too, if you get downtown much. You just get on an elevator on the ground floor, and ride straight to the top. If the first stop is at the second that's your first figure. If the second stop is the sixth and the third the eighth, then your lucky number is 268. But never get in elevator for this purpose in a three story building."

The numbers racket, they tell me, is very widespread in this city. I don't know—and nobody at police headquarters could tell me—what the estimated daily "take" might be. But if the numbers addict follows all these methods—and there are many more—it would seem that the loss in time and energy ergs would balance the actual monetary expenditure any day.

I tried a numbers system of my own once, in school. My laundry number there was 32, so I bet on the third horse in the second race to win but he never did, so now I trust implicity in Bill Bennings. They say he follows the elevator method.

Riots Staged in Poland As Jews Call Wide Strike

Warsaw, March 13 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).—New disorders broke out today in Skrzyn and Turka in Central Poland as Jewish labor proclaimed a nation-wide strike for next Tuesday in protest against anti-Semitic excesses.

The entire Jewish population fled from Skrzyn after a mob had attacked 30 families, seriously injuring two persons.

Richberg Opposes Base-Point Price Plan at Senate Hearing

Former NRA Head Says, However, That Overnight Change Would 'Dislocate' Industry; Steel Men Appear Against Wheeler Bill.

By the Associated Press.

Use of the basing-point system of fixing prices yesterday was termed "idealistically and theoretically bad" by Donald R. Richberg, former NRA administrator.

In testimony before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee he added, however, that overnight elimination of the system would have "a very drastic effect" on industry.

Drawing on his experience as administrator of the old NRA steel code, Richberg was summoned to give his views on a bill by Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, calling for a prohibition of the system whereby the price charged includes the production cost plus transportation costs from base points.

Richberg said "public antagonism is often generated by price-fixing systems." He testified that in the steel code NRA did not seek to fix prices, but to put a "floor" on prices, beneath which they could not go. The steel code contained the basing point system.

Discussing the other side of the question, Richberg said sudden elimination of the basing point formula would "dislocate" industry and seriously damage plant investments.

"That would put a lot of little plants out of business," he said.

Richberg and D. A. Williams, president of the Continental Steel Corporation of Kokomo, Ind., the preceding witness, agreed that dislocation of industry would be in the form of a scramble to erect plants in the more important consuming areas.

They said their business would be seriously injured by passage of the measure.

McKaig, whose company is a subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation, agreed that present system might be "modified."

Byrd Launches Fight Over New Alcohol Bureau

Plans Senate Action to Balk Creation of Independent Agency as 'Useless.'

By the Associated Press.

A proposed thirty-seventh new Government agency was picked yesterday by Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, as the first target of his drive against what he terms "useless" and "overlapping" Federal bureaus.

Even as he eyed the proposed new independent Alcohol Control Administration, the Virginian charted the course of his newly created committee set up by the Senate to investigate Government agencies and see which can be abolished.

Byrd conferred with the President yesterday at the latter's invitation to discuss the committee's investigating plans. The senator said Mr. Roosevelt "indicated he was entirely sympathetic with the move."

Removal of the Alcohol Control Administration from the Treasury and creation of a new independent agency has been proposed in an amendment now before the Senate Finance Committee, of which Byrd is a member.

Threatens Floor Fight.

"I will fight this move to set up a new board of three, each with $10,000 a year salaries, in committee, and if I am not successful there the fight will be taken to the floor," Byrd said.

"There apparently is no very good reason why alcohol control should not continue under the Treasury Department as it is at present."

Byrd said he considered his talk with the President as a "go-ahead" signal for his committee, whose membership includes Majority Leader Robinson, of Arkansas; Minority Leader McNary, of Oregon, and Senators O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, and Townsend (Republican), Delaware.

The amendment to make the Alcohol Control Administration an independent agency is generally regarded in Congressional circles to have New Deal support. A similar move was unsuccessful last year.

"Passage of the amendment would be directly across the purposes of our investigation," Byrd said, "and would create the thirty-seventh new agency within the Government since 1933."

Meanwhile, after beating down a proposed revolutionary revision of the Federal liquor tax system, the Senate Finance Committee became deadlocked temporarily on the independent Administration plan. It was carried over to a Monday hearing.

Suggested by Copeland.

The tax revision as suggested by Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, in an amendment to a bill passed last session by the House and now before the Finance Committee.

Copeland proposed eliminating all Federal taxes on distilleries, rectifiers and wholesalers, and placing the entire tax on the retailers to prevent "pyramiding" of the tax as it was passed from one handler to another.

He estimated $300,000,000 in increased revenue would accrue to the Treasury and to the States, and at the same time predicted liquor prices would be reduced. Lower prices in turn, would eliminate bootlegging, he said.

Defeated also was an amendment by Senator Murphy (Democrat), Iowa, designed to prohibit use of "black strap" cane molasses in production of liquors "historically" made from grain, such as whisky and gin. He claimed the market should be saved for grain growers.

'Guignol' Master Entertains Here

Plump, excitable Fernand Brossard, guignoliste extraordinary, sat precariously on the edge of his chair in a steamship office here yesterday and talked volubly of his art—the guignol or puppet show.

The guignol is an adaptation of the Italian form of puppet show, the marionettes. Marionette puppets are operated by strings by persons above the stage. The guignoliste operates from below stage level, manipulating the figures with three fingers of each hand. Thus unless a guignoliste has helpers no more than two puppet characters can be on the stage at the same time. Brossard, who for 15 years has been giving puppet shows on French Line ships, performs in both French and English.

On shipboard Brossard has entertained, among other notables, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, mother of the President, and Pierre Laval, former French premier.

In Washington Brossard performed Thursday at the French Embassy. Yesterday he performed at the Palais Royal. He will put on another exhibition there today as well as at Maret School and the Convent of the Sacred Heart.

Tax 'Cushion' Approved

poration tax would be 4½ per cent of total earnings.

Following is the sub-committee's table explaining the effective tax rates resulting from the proposed graduated tax on the undistributed net income of corporations (all in percentages):

| Total Net Income Retained. | Distrib. | Effective rate on amount retained. | Ef. rate in terms of total net inc. |
| 0 | 100 | .... | ... |
| 10 | 90 | 15.0 | 1.5 |
| 20 | 80 | 22.5 | 4.5 |
| 30 | 70 | 30.0 | 9.0 |
| 40 | 60 | 36.3 | 14.5 |
| 50 | 50 | 40.0 | 20.0 |
| 60 | 40 | 42.5 | 25.5 |
| 70 | 30 | 44.3 | 31.0 |
| 80 | 20 | 45.6 | 36.5 |
| 90 | 10 | 46.7 | 42.0 |
| 100 | 0 | 47.5 | 47.5 |

Taking for illustrative purposes a corporation earning $100,000, and assuming this concern decided to retain 30 per cent of profits for reserve purposes, experts figure it would pay a tax of only 9 per cent or $9,000, as applied to total earnings, although the effective rate on the amount actually retained would be 30 per cent.

Under present levies this same corporation would have to pay a 16½ per cent tax on total net earnings, or $16,500, experts contend. They argue that only corporations failing to distribute well over 40 per cent in dividends would actually pay a higher tax under the present system. In defense of the new rates, they point out that corporation reserves for the past 15 years have averaged only 31.8 per cent of total earnings.

Corporations' View.

Corporations on the other hand may well contend that whereas formerly they have been able to pay the tax out of total earnings, before setting aside dividends and distributing earnings, they would have to pay the tax out of the small amount set aside for reserves, reducing this amount proportionately. Thus the $9,000 tax that would be paid by the company earning $100,000, would be deducted from the $30,000 set aside for reserves, actually leaving only $21,000.

Shareholders likewise may argue that although more dividends may be forced into their pockets under the new plan, they would be subject to income taxation, whereas formerly they were tax free except in the surtax income brackets. A further complication is the fact that some State laws prohibit payment of dividends as long as a corporation's capital structure is impaired.

Agreement on the tentative schedules followed a long period of negotiations with the Treasury, and a recent secrecy "lid" clamped on the sub-committee following publication of conflicting versions of what the group was doing. The "gag" was removed Thursday, after reports of the committee's activities continued in defiance of the rule.

Open Hearings Soon.

Representative Robert L. Doughton, of North Carolina, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, indicated last night that open hearings on a tentative bill may not begin for another ten days.

The sub-committee passed much of yesterday debating how to tax dividends going to foreign shareholders. Chairman Hill explained that repeal of existing corporate taxes (under which dividends are taxed at the source), would automatically exempt foreign investors unless some specific provision were made. The sub-committee favors taxing this type of dividend at the source, but has not determined how it can be done.

Representative Hill said the question had arisen as to whether a tax at the source would drive foreign capital from American investments. If some special differential were afforded foreign investors, it might provide an incentive for Americans to set up 'straw men' in foreign countries, he pointed out.

It was his view that all corporation's should be treated alike under the new undistributed earnings tax plan.

"One corporation might need 20 per cent for reserves, while another might need 75 per cent, if in dire need," he said, "but you cannot go outside and consider individual cases."

Although the schedule agreed to yesterday by the sub-committee granted no exemption to banks and insurance companies, no final action has been taken on this latter point. A majority of the sub-committee is said to favor special treatment of fiduciary institutions of this character.

Hill admitted that by reorganization, some corporations might be able to escape the undistributed earnings tax in part.

"We have yet to consider this," he said however, "and if any loopholes are left, we can expect them to take advantage of them."

Hill was asked if the subcommittee would take any action on tax exempt securities.

"Tax exempt securities are tax exempt, and we can't do anything about it," he said.

The sub-committee has yet to consider extensively the proposed 90 per cent "windfall" tax designed to reach processing taxes refunded by Supreme Court order. Nor has any progress been made on the President's proposal to re-enact a broadened scale of processing taxes, with lowered rates.

Uncle Sam Aims To Tutor Nation Over Air Waves

Nation-Wide Broadcasts Planned; First Set for Monday Night.

Uncle Sam is going on the air with a new series of dramatized, educational broadcasts that will give radio listeners a chance to brush up on forgotten school lessons and to learn a number of things some of their teachers never knew.

The first of these broadcasts, prepared under the direction of the United States Office of Education, with the assistance of WPA funds, will be broadcast Monday at 6:35 p. m. over the N. B. C. network.

Entitled "Have You Heard?" the program will dramatize a number of interesting scientific facts and explain scientifically the "why" of some everyday occurrences.

History to Be Revived.

On Friday a second program called "Answer This One," will be broadcast. This will consist of the asking of 20 questions, answers to which should be a matter of general knowledge, but which William Dow Boutwell, in charge of the project, predicts will stump the average listener in 10 cases of the 20. Both programs will be run for 13 consecutive weeks.

Several other series of broadcasts dealing with the origin of words, the Smithsonian Institution, Latin America and "Interviews With the Past," bringing to the microphone distinguished historical figures like Benjamin Franklin and Robert Fulton, are being prepared for presentation soon by the radio project division.

More than six years of research in the field of educational broadcasting and two years of experimentation with actual programs have gone into the making of this new series. The significance of the new programs, Boutwell explained yesterday, is that, where the usual educational broadcast has been done by teachers and educators, these programs have been written, produced and enacted by trained radio producers, script writers and performers.

Actual work on the new programs was begun last winter when the WPA allotted $75,000 for the project. Experienced radio men were hired as supervisors and the relief rolls, not only in the District, but in New York and other cities and the CCC camps, were combed for the best available writing and dramatic talent. Several unemployed newspapermen were set to work turning out radio scripts, a jobless engineer was given the sound recording job, while actors whom the radio had driven out of jobs were given the opportunity to take a try at the new form of entertainment.

Radio Heads Like Program.

After the scripts were written they were cast under the direction of Morris Lowell, formerly with the N. B. C. studios, and run off into phonograph records. The "Ask Me Again" record was played last week in the N. B. C. studio and network executives said "we'll take it."

Hundreds Seek Roles in Capital Movie

Max Allentuck, the casting director of the all-local movie to be produced under the sponsorship of The Post and Loew's Fox Theater, was busy yesterday with hundreds of applicants for the main roles, "bit" and "extra" parts to be awarded for the filming soon of "It Happened in Washington." As soon as casting is complete, production will begin and it won't be long before the film will be on display at the Fox.

Peace Is Theme As Synagogue Parley Opens

Dr. Lewis Levitsky, Rabbi Nathan Rosen Denounce War at Convention.

Speaking at special religious services held at Adas Irael Hebrew Congregation and B'nai Israel Talmud Torah Congregation to open the national biennial convention of the United Synagogue of America, Dr. Louis M. Levitsy, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and Rabbi Nathan N. Rosen, Brooklyn, N. Y., last night showed how the history of Judaism can be applied to present-day conditions.

Dr. Levitsky, at the Adas Israel Hebrew Congregation, Sixth and I streets northwest, spoke on "Judaism, a Great Adventure." He said that youths' readiness for adventure had swelled the ranks of dictators' armies, but that the true adventure for Jewish youth lay in the promulgation of peace. The Jewish part, he said, has always been and should now be the choice of the book rather than the sword.

At the B'nai Israel Talmud Torah Congregation, Fourteenth and Emerson streets northwest, Rabbi Rosen delivered an address titled "The United Synagogue Looks Forward." Rabbi Rosen's serwon also was in advocation of peace.

Peace and true democracy, Rabbi Rosen said, can never be attained in a collectivist state but only through individualism. Judaism, he stated, guaranteed personal freedom and self-expression that could never be had under dictatorships.

The next meeting of the United Synagogue Convention will be at Adas Israel Hebrew Congregation this afternoon at 3. Other events will fill the Sunday program and on Monday evening the convention will be addressed by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes. The convention ends Tuesday morning.

District Youngsters Besiege Director for Local Film Role

Hundreds of enterprising young Washingtonians, representing virtually every high school and college locally, responded to Hollywood's alluring call yesterday by besieging the casting director of the all-local motion picture "It Happened in Washington," to be produced under the sponsorship of The Post and the Loew's Fox Theater.

Out of the welter of the first day's applicants the casting expert, Max Allentuck, emerged with a smiling countenance from the Franklin room of the Ambassador Hotel satisfied that Washington's young men and young women are possessed of real talent. "I realize now," he stated, "how difficult it will be to select only 25 principals from this grand list; that's how much excellent talent there is registered here."

And thus, with the first day and night of casting over, activity for the projected filming of this local sound movie gains impetus. Casting continues from 3 to 6 o'clock this afternoon only, and will be resumed on Monday at the same hour and again from 7 to 9 p. m. Monday night. All applicants are urged to report to the casting director in the Ambassador Hotel's Franklin room.

The movie is the first project of its kind ever to be attempted in Washington. The Washington Post and the Loew's Fox Theater, where the film will be shown at a later date, are proud to offer young Washingtonians this opportunity to see themselves on the screen, as well as to present those with talent with the chance to crash through Hollywood's gates. In addition to the principal roles, some 200 extras and bit players will be used.

It is not essential that you be a beautiful girl or, if a fellow, a "sheik." In fact beauty, while always desired, will not be the sole qualification. If you have any talent whatever, file your application immediately. All boys and girls between 16 and 21 who live in or near Washington are eligible.

If you qualify, you'll have the grand thrill of seeing yourself on the Fox screen in actual movies. New York and Hollywood executives will view the completed picture with the purpose of possibly signing those Washingtonians who exhibit screen potentialities. It's a whale of an opportunity!

their old jobs back. Most of them were allowed to return to work."

James J. Bambrick, strike leader, said, however, that his survey of the situation, after reading the owners' advertised offer to reemploy individual strikers, showed that "the lines were standing firmer than ever today."

Under the Metropolitan agreement, Ferdinand A. Silcox, chief of the United States Forestry Service, will act as mediator of the union's demand for closed shop, 48-hour week, $8 raise and vacation periods.

The Advisory Board's new proposal embraces arbitration of all these points by Silcox, who has been declared acceptable to both sides, but it maintains that the 15 per cent of "acceptable" replacement workers must be retained under the arbitration agreement.

This is a position which Bambrick has declared impossible, holding that "every man must go back to work" before he will submit to arbitration.

These developments came swiftly after Bambrick had announced he would ask the Rev. Charles A. Coughlin, Detroit priest, to publicize his charges that the banks here are spending huge sums of Federal money in an effort to break the strike.

asked Clerk Whitacre to get their approval.

Whitacre began an investigation, and the culmination came yesterday with Peter's arrest.

Between March 14 and December 18, 1935, it was said, Peter ordered vouchers made out in 14 instances. In nine of these, it was said, the procedure was irregular.

Peter is the son of the late Judge Edward Peter and a nephew of former Judge Robert B. Peter. His ancestors have played an important part in the State's history. His grandfather was George Peter, president of the Maryland Senate in 1888. His great-grandfather was Maj. George Peter, a member of Congress. His great-great-grandfather, Robert Peter, was the first Mayor of Georgetown. That was back in Colonial times when Georgetown was part of Maryland.

Edward Peter entered Montgomery County politics at an early age. From the outset he was opposed to Maj. E. Brooke Lee, who for 15 years dominated the Democratic organization in the county. In 1934 Peter succeeded in breaking the Lee machine's control over the board of county commissioners.

Wilmer Rites Today; Burial At Cathedral

Rev. Freeman to Officiate at Funeral Services for Eye Specialist.

Private funeral services for Dr. William Holland Wilmer, internationally known eye specialist and a pioneer in the study of eye diseases, will be held this afternoon at his residence 2101 R street northwest. He died there Thursday morning in his seventy-third year.

Following services, the burial will take place in the chapel of the Washington Cathedral, of which Dr. Wilmer was a trustee since 1915. The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, and president of the Cathedral Foundation, will officiate at the interment.

Hundreds of messages of condolence to the family and tributes to the doctor, who numbered among his patients kings and presidents as well as hundreds of poor and unemployed, were received at the home all day yesterday.

Among those who sent messages of regret were former Secretary of State Kellogg, former Secretary of the Interior, James R. Garfield, Mrs. Irving Berlin, wife of the music composer; Clarence Mackay, president of the Postal Telegraph Co.; Dr. Hans Luther, Ambassador from Germany; Supreme Court Justices Stone and McReynolds, Gordon Rentschler, president of the National City Bank; Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, and Col. Henry Breckinridge.

Many of the messages came from personal friends and others from former patients whose eyesight had been saved by the skill of the great doctor. It was Mrs. Henry Breckinridge, who in 1922, out of gratitude for the doctor's having saved her eyesight, launched a drive for funds that culminated in the establishment of the Wilmer Opthamological Institute at Johns Hopkins University.

For nine years, until he reached the retirement age of 70, Dr. Wilmer directed that institute, the finest of its kind in the world. In the two years since his retirement he has been practicing in this city, where he spent the greater part of his career as an eye surgeon and teacher from 1889 to 1925.

Berry to Give President Plan For Industries

Council Approves Proposal for Drastic Revision of Anti-Trust Laws.

Recommendations for a national industrial policy are expected to be presented to President Roosevelt today by Maj. George L. Berry, the President's industrial co-ordinator. They were adopted Thursday by Berry's industrial council after being submitted by committees of the council.

Four recommendations, adopted unanimously, call for drastic revision of the antitrust laws, proposed withdrawal of the Government from competition with private enterprise with some exceptions, and deal with "internal and external competition."

Opposes Minimum Hours Bill.

Other committee recommendations, however, met with opposition. Five of the 125 members present voted against a proposal for establishment of a Federal commission to pass on maximum hours of work and minimum wages, industry by industry, and to pass on the minimum age limits in different industries with a view to restricting child labor. A minority report will be filed, Berry announced.

Speculation arose as to whether the council was not calling, in this recommendation, for control such as was invalidated by the Schechter case decision which threw out the NRA. In view of assurances, however, that nothing was intended by the council which would not be legal in view of Supreme Court decisions, it was assumed that the recommendation called for voluntary co-operative action on the part of the industries.

One dissenting vote was cast against the report on financial aid to small enterprises, and three council members voted against adoption of the report on fair trade practices.

The latter report proposed compelling minority recalcitrants to submit to fair trade practices agreements promulgated by the majority in an industry and approved by the Federal Trade Commission. Open price reporting under Government sponsorship is also urged "provided it is not used as a device for price-fixing."

Favor Anti-Trust Changes.

Amendment of the anti-trust laws is favored to allow "affirmative action by competitors" to eliminate destructive competitive practices. Division of the Federal Trade Commission into two bodies, one for invehtigation and prosecution and one for judicial action, also was urged. The recommendation which drew one negative vote urges expansion and extension of RFC authority to make direct loans to small businesses.

The council in the final resolution adopted said:

"The council's brief history is a record of accomplishment, pointing the way to solutions of the Nation's most stubborn and baffling problefs. It is significant of the development of that future co-operation between industry and Government which is essential to general welfare.

"President Roosevelt sponsored the establishment of the council. The Government's sponsorship should be continued.

"The movement, in which the council is the initial step, should progress because the underlying concept of relationships and unity of interest is undenibaly sound, and because of a growing recognition of the fact that co-operation with industry and between industry and Government must be relied upon as the bulwark against Government dominance of industry."

Romance, Music, Comedy, Melodrama Occupy Local Screens as New Week Opens

Jack Benny Is Fox Headliner With Ace Revue

Fine Artists in Support; Duo Reunited at Earle; Other Programs.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE CALL OF BUGLE ANN." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the novel by Mackinlay Kantor, adapted to the screen by Harvey Gates and Samuel Hoffenstein. Starring Lionel Barrymore, with Maureen O'Sullivan, Eric Linden, Charles Grapewin, Dudley Digges, Spring Byington, Henry Wadsworth, Jonathan Hale and Frederick Burton. Directed by Richard Thorpe. Previewed Tuesday, March 10.

Performing his antic comicalities in practically fine fettle at yesterday afternoon's third presentation of the stage bill at Loew's Fox, Jack Benny and his assisting artists, to all intents and purposes, knocked the customers right out of their pews.

Mr. Benny is too well known to Washington as a prime exponent of three mediums of entertainment—stage, screen and radio—to require any extended personal encomium at this time. He still works with the deliberateness of a comedian with a genius for proper pace and, of all things, toward the end of his revue actually plays his violin. Not only that, but he plays his number clear through to the end! This in itself is enough to mark the revue as unique. The selection is "Thanks a Million" and Mr. Benny really plays it. When he starts to sing it, that is something else again. But that goes on for only one continuous measure!

In the meantime, Mr. Benny is monologuing all over the place, introducing his supporting acts, clowning with the principals and bantering with Mary Livingstone, the poet laureate of Plainfield, N. J. His material is clever, witty and bright and Benny dresses it up with stage business and pantomime that doubles its value.

The Poetess Recites.

Miss Livingstone reads one of her inspired bursts of poesy into the microphone and then sings with the effectiveness of a schooled balladist.

To open his revue, Mr. Benny presents the Stuart Morgan Dancers, three stalwart young men and a wisp of a girl, who execute the most hazardous adagio feats to be seen on the contemporary stage. What holds this fragile young woman together, the way she is hurled about, this particular typewriter never shall know. The act is handsomely staged and flawlessly presented.

The Three Chicken Sisters, "harmony singers," again are among those present with their grotesque and intensely amusing burlesque of the usual close-harmony vocalists. In striking contrast with their travestied numbers is the splendid singing of Georges Metaxa, who has not been heard here, to the best of my memory, since he appeared at the National in Jerome Kern's "The Cat and the Fiddle."

For his opening number Metaxa sings the popular "Alone" and then in a comedy bit with Jack Benny and Miss Livingstone, "Lovely to Look At." His finest offering by far, however, is the one he sings last—"When a Gypsy Makes His Violin Cry," a romantic ballad that leads the singer in the realm of standard music.

The revue is closed by that band of nine whirlwind acrobatic gymnasts known as the Liazeed Arabian Troupe. I shall never understand why these people do not kill themselves, either.

Screen Epic of Hound.

On the screen as foremost film feature for the week is "The Call of Bugle Ann," a homely and touching melodrama of the Missouri hills and the love of an old man for his dogs, in which Lionel Barrymore plays the stellar role with a simple and irresistible honesty that adds a constant touch of pathos to a play that is wholly unrelieved by comedy. Happily, it is not also devoid of action.

The basis of the story of "The Call of Bugle Ann" is the running of hounds to the foxes through the wooded highlands of Missouri, where life is lived at a slow tempo and the traditions of generations cling to the land. Into this community there comes an enemy of both human and animal life in the person of Jacob Terry. He pays with his life for the transgression of the neighborhood code and Spring Davis, the old inhabitant with an unquenchable love for his hounds, is convicted of the murder.

It is from this situation that the moving denouement of an unadorned backwoods drama is derived.

Romance Ends Happily.

It is this situation, also that paves the way for the love affair of Maureen O'Sullivan and Eric Linden, as the children, respectively, of the murdered and the murderer. These two and the elder Barrymore do splendid work in their present assignments and are ably supported by Charles Grapewin, Spring Byington and Dudley Digges.

The picture is well produced and directed and especially effective in its night shots of the running of the foxes.

The Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkins "Beautiful Galates" overture, by Von Suppe, are the auxiliary features of a bill that is wholly indebted to Mr. Benny and his associate artists for the considerable distinction it possesses.

Earle

"DESIRE," Paramount picturization of a comedy by Hans Szekely and R. A. Stemmle, adapted to the screen by Waldemar Young, Edwin Justus Mayer and Samuel Hoffenstein, co-starring Marlene Dietrich and Gary Cooper, with John Halliday, Ernest Cossart, Alan Mowbray, William Frawley, Akim Tamiroff and Zeffie Tilbury. Incidental music and lyrics by Frederick Hollander and Leo Robin. Directed by Frank Borzage. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

In their first joint vehicle since "Morocco," Marlene Dietrich and Gary Cooper reveal themselves as especially deft interpreters of light comedy-romance, tinctured with just a dash of melodrama and a moment of climateric suspense. The excerpts from "Desire," which were disclosed to the local drama desks by an emissary from the Paramount home office some months ago, gave no hint of the beauty, the charm, the humor or the variegated content of this thoroughly interesting and diverting bit of adventurous fluff.

The picture on the screen at the Earle, apart from the punctilious manner in which it has been cast, produced and photographed, is nothing to carry away in memory. It is, however, completely agreeable entertainment while it lasts.

Opening on a comedy note, with Gary Cooper delivering a tirade to the empty chair of his boss on the topic of a deserved European vacation before returning from Paris to his motor-car engineering in Detroit, the action then moves to Miss Dietrich's clever scheme to purloin a pearl necklace worth 2,200,000 francs by means no less amusing. The pearls once in her possession by a clever ruse, a mad dash for Spain is undertaken. Tom Bradley is already on the way to the same destination when Madeleine de Beaupre overtakes him in her bigger and speedier roadster.

Uses Tom As Cache.

The device by which she causes Tom to assist her in getting the pearls across the frontier, the entry of Carlos Margoli into the plot as a master jewel thief, the bogus legerdemain by which the necklace is recovered from Tom's pocket and the subsequent surrender of both Tom and Madeleine to the magic of Spanish moonlight—much to the Margoli displeasure—are incidents in a briskly moving succession of events, which only at the very end fail to develop a breezy and ingratiating quality of sophisticated humor.

One suspects that many of the views in Paris, crossing the Pyrenees, in the villages of Spain, in San Sebastian and finally in a fine old mountain inn are what is known to the trade as "process shots," but, however they were obtained, they are extremely beautiful and photographed with a high degree of artistry.

"Desire" is handsomely acted by all concerned. Miss Dietrich still plays with the utmost repression, but her husky voice is heard in one excellent song and never has she appeared more beautifully gowned and surrounded than in this subject. Mr. Cooper likewise does himself proud. Gary Cooper never has been one of my favorite actors, but in "Desire" he ceases to be an actor and is wholly and disarmingly himself. He plays the role of Tom Bradley as if he were, in fact, Tom Bradley, which probably is the epitome of what acting is supposed to be. John Halliday completes the triumvirate of principals by forming the third angle of a triangle which, while not domestic, is exceedingly actual.

Support and Stage Show.

In the supporting cast, Ernest Cossart and Alan Mowbray, as the famous jeweler and noted psychiatrist Madeleine pits against each other for the sake of securing that fabulous necklace; William Frawley, as the Paris employer of Bradley, and Zeffie Tilbury contribute generously to a flawless ensemble that reflects the Ernst Lubitsch finesse in casting. In a bit which he makes important, Akin Tamiroff scores emphatically as an embarrassed chief of police in one short scene.

In her first appearance on a Washington stage since she appeared at the National in Ziegfeld's "Hot-Cha," June Knight yesterday registered a distinctly pleasant impression as headliner of the week's vaudeville bill. Her act is brief, but interesting and artistically done. Her first number is "Begin the Beguin," followed by the dance she created to the same melody for "Jubilee," in which she closed only a week ago tonight. She closes with a specially arranged medley of songs from "The Broadway Melody of 1936," in which she also was importantly cast, including "I've Got a Feelin' You're Foolin'," "You Are My Lucky Star" and "Broadway Rhythm." Miss Knight is a mezzo-soprano with range and power and a dancer of unusual endowment, although her present act does not permit her to display the full range of her capabilities in this regard. Her costume is a gorgeous creation.

Opener "Stops Show."

First to be introduced by Audrey Sieber, gowned in her new spring frocks, are the Balabanow Five, four young women and a man, who are accordionists, dancers, acrobats and gymnasts. They virtually stopped yesterday's first show, an achievement for an opening act that is unique.

The deuce spot is occupied by that amazing parrot known as John Tio. John Tio, unless ventriloquism enters into the business somewhere, is one of the wonders of the world.

Those agile and ultra modern dancing comics, the Three Wier Brothers, rate the ovation their brilliantly amusing catalogue of stunts receives. They are in a class by themselves in the perfection of their gymnastic clowning.

Newsreel, "The Little Stranger," an animated natural color cartoon comedy, and C. Frederick Clark's overture, with Bert Granoff singing from the orchestra pit, augment a program that is commended as seasonable and scintillant diversion.

Metropolitan

"THE WALKING DEAD." Warner Brothers picturization of a story by Edward Adamson and Joseph Fields, adapted to the screen play by Edward Adamson, Peter Milne, Robert Andrews and Lillie Hayward, starring Boris Karloff, supported by Ricardo Cortez, Edmund Gwenn, Marguerite Churchill, Warren Hull, Barton MacLane, Henry O'Neill, Joseph King, Paul Harvey, Robert Strange and Joseph Sawyer. Directed by Michael Curtiz. Previewed Thursday, March 5, by W. A. Whitney.

For years, ever since the first of the so-called horror pictures came to the screen, one company has sought to out-do another in bringing to the screen a conglomeration of impossibilities all mixed together to produce goose-flesh drama. But, in these eyes, nearly all the ventures have been so obvious, so palpaby lacking in what goes to make up the true illusion of the theater, that many of the offerings have been little short of comedy—of a sort.

It is, then, a distinct pleasure to report at last a picture of the "horror" sort which is reasonably founded in fact, deliberately and convincingly developed in plot and theme and superbly performed. That is "The Walking Dead."

Briefly the story is one of retributive justice wrought by one who was electrocuted for a murder he did not commit, and how through the ministrations of science—based on the utilization of the "Lindbergh lung-heart" and the clinical resurrection technique of Drs. Alexis Carrel and Robert Cornish—he is brought back from the dead literally to avenge his own death.

Is Serious Drama.

While there is a moment or two of levity, this is indeed a serious drama—one to be taken no less seriously than it was made. One cannot, of course, go quite as far as the authors did; but, nevertheless, accepting their premises, the drama is convincingly told, forming a commentary quite worth the consideration of cinemagoers, be they of a philosophical turn of mind or merely seekers after the unusual, and thrilling, in motion picture entertainment.

The manner in which "the walking dead" accomplished his end—without himself being the physical agency of violent death—is also firmly based upon secientific truths.

For such a realistico-fantastic story no better equipped actor could possibly be found than Boris Karloff for the title role. He is a tower of dramatic strength. His relative lack of dialogue makes the power of his pantomime the more compelling.

Edmund Gwenn the Doctor.

The good doctor, performing the resurrection experiment, and his assistants are Edmund Gwenn, Marguerite Churchill and Warren Hull. The machinations of the piece are in the hands of Ricardo Cortez, as the brains of the political mob; Barton MacLane, Paul Harvey, Robert Strange and Joseph Sawyer. Henry O'Neill is the prosecuting attorney and Joseph King is the judge whose scrupulous honesty leads to his assassination.

An excellent series of short subject comprise the supporting bill, bringing a degree of lightness to a heavy feature. "Pirate's Party at Catalina" is a Technicolor musical revue of cinema stars at play.

Dr. Marion Sayle Taylor relates in word and re-enactment another of his "Voice of Experience" cases. "Boom Boom" is a clever cartoon. The combined releases of the Paramount and the Universal News reels round out a program of excellence and variety.

Palace

"WIFE VERSUS SECRETARY." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of Faith Baldwin's story, adapted to the screen by Norma Krasna, John Lee Mahin and Alice Duer Miller, starring Clark Gable, Myrna Loy and Jean Harlow, supported by James Stewart, May Robson and George Barbier. Directed by Clarence Brown. Reviewed, second week, by Dorothea Lewis.

An outstanding fact worthy of recording in re: second week "Wife Versus Secretary" is the astoundingly beneficial affect of a steam bath on Mr. Clark Gable.

Mr. Gable starts out in this interesting story of a triangle, that really isn't a triangle, as a very ham actor indeed—stiff, self-conscious, uncomfortable. A few reels go by, in one he takes a steam bath, and from that moment on he gives an easy, pleasant, sincere and likeable performance of a faithful husband called "unfaithful" with disastrous results.

Other second week impressions are: That James Stewart in a brief role does the best acting job in the picture; that Myrna Loy is more attractive than ever, which means pulenty; that Jean Harlow is better and more natural than usual and in better "voice;" that men are having a lot of fun laughing at the catty women of the piece; that these women are distressingly lifelike but also very much like the gossipy hens in the Walt Disney cartoon; that coincidence and suspicion are pals.

A Walt Disney delight, "Cock o' the Walk," has all manner of fun with the Carioca and outdoes Mr. Busby Berkeley and all the dance epic gentlemen of his ilk. The chick and worm turn is our meat, but they all have a chance from the peacocks to the caterpillars, and how they do quiver!

RKO-Keith's

"FOLLOW THE FLEET." RKO-Radio picturization of the stage play, "Shore Leave," with screen play by Dwight Taylor and Allan Scott, co-starring Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, supported by Randolph Scott, Harriet Hilliard and Astrid Allwyn. Music and lyrics by Irving Berlin; ensembles staged by Hermes Pan. Directed by Mark Sandrich. Reviewed (second week) by W. A. Whitney.

To the followers of the terpsichorean careers of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, "Follow the Fleet" will need no further recommendation than the plain information that these two dancing stars are again on view in shadow form.

The others matter little, for there are no great number of them!

"Follow the Fleet" is more than a 100 per cent Astaire-Rogers opus, it is a good (though rather routine) story, commendably acted and vigorously directed. What the picture may lack for those, whose memory goes back to the original Belasco production on the speaking stage, it makes up in offering the dancing duo in one of their best—if less spectacular—offerings.

Some may miss the gigantic routines, like the Continental, but Mr. Astaire and Miss Rogers do sufficient and completely satisfying numbers to militate against any serious objection on this point.

Harriet Hilliard Scores.

As an added attraction, there is Harriet Hilliard, an ingratiating lass with a charming voice which is raised in two songs, "Get Thee Behind Me, Satan" and "Here I Am, But Where Are You?"

Mr. Astaire has two numbers, too: "We Saw the Sea" and "I'd Rather Lead a Band," and he and Miss Rogers combine their vocal talents on "Let Yourself Go," "I'm Putting All My Eggs in One Basket" and "Let's Face the Music and Dance."

As is common knowledge by this time, Irving Berlin wrote the music.

Randolph Scott does nicely opposite Miss Hilliard, and Astrid Allwyn is quite all right as the single corner for a couple of triangles. A large cast is in support—excellent support, too.

The Pathe News rounds out a program of high entertainment value.

Columbia

"THE PRISONER OF SHARK ISLAND." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a screen play by Nunnally Johnson, starring Warner Baxter, with Gloria Stuart, Claude Gillingwater, Arthur Byron, O. P. Heggie, Harry Carey, Francis Ford, Francis McDonald, John Carradine, Fred Kohler, jr., Frank McGlyn, sr., J. M. Kerrigan, Leila McIntyre, Paul McVey and Ernest Whitman. Directed by John Ford. Reviewed (return engagement) Friday morning by Sally Stroud.

When Dr. Samuel A. Mudd, a country doctor in Maryland, went on trial for alleged conspiracy in the assassination of President Lincoln, he faced a military court instructed to quell the national hysteria with drastic sentences for him and his co-suspects.

Given a life sentence in the Federal prison in the Dry Tortugas, he was subject from his first day to insult and injury. Through the assistance of a faithful slave and inspired by his gallant young wife, he effected a partial escape from the prison, swimming a shark-infested moat to reach a waiting rescue boat. Apprehended, he was thrown into a dungeon with the slave, Buck. There he languished, his hopes growing gaunt as his undernourished body. Until, one day, the prison commandant asked his help in fighting a plague of yellow fever, which was ravaging the populace of the prison.

Gallantly the doctor fought the dread yellow-jacket, quelled a mutiny, and compelled a government ship to land doctors and supplies. Then he, too, was smitten. The grateful Commandant, in a special-messenger-letter to the President, urged executive clemency for Dr. Mudd.

And back in Maryland, to the arms of his wife and child, went Dr. Mudd, exonerated for a crime of which he was innocent.

The direction of John Ford is superbly paced, with the tense suspense of the attempt-at-escape the highlight. Please note two scenes in particular, for their sheer artistry: The deathview of Lincoln, when a checked curtain drawn before his face gradually merges into a blocked design; the Benda-mask-effect of the upside-down face of the Negro Buck, when the light streams into the dungeon where he and Mudd are incarcerated.

Good characterizations are contributed by Gloria Stuart as Mrs. Mudd; Claude Gillingwater, her Yankee-hating father, with the Toledo blade given him by Stonewall Jackson; Arthur Byron, John Carradine, Ernest Whitman, Buck; and Warner Baxter as the title character, which he plays with poignant earnestness.

The newsreel and Terrytoon comedy complete the bill.

More than 140 cases of the disease have been reported to health authorities.

Kindler Spurs $100,000 Drive For Symphony

Warns Campaign Workers That Failure Means Curb on Orchestra.

Failure of the National Symphony Orchestra Association to reach the $100,000 goal in its current drive will deprive the symphony of its natural artistic and material growth, Hans Kindler, conductor, told campaign volunteers at their luncheon yesterday at the Carlton Hotel.

The orchestra should be enabled to increase its personnel and provisions made for more concerts, he said.

"While the orchestra has been successful during the first four and one-half years of its existence, there is danger of too great a feeling of satisfaction," the conductor pointed out. The addition of players would make possible a wider variety of tonal effects, he said.

Traces Growth of Orchestra.

Dr. Kindler traced the growth of the orchestra since its first season in 1931, when the men, paid on an hourly basis, played 24 concerts. This year the musicians, all on a weekly salary, are giving a total of 60 concerts, each of which have drawn from 2,000 to 3,000 music lovers.

In complimenting the campaign workers on their activity since the present drive started a week ago, Dr. Kindler said the modest growth of the orchestra, supported chiefly through small donations, is a strong asset. In cities where symphony concerts are presented to the people by wealthy donors, there is apt to be a general apathy on the part of the public, he believed.

Reports yesterday were made by committee chairmen as follows: $686.50, metropolitan; $89.25, Navy; $50, suburban; $59.98, Army; $165, association; $701.80, business; $25, national; $12, "sporting chance," and $611, Government.

Final Luncheon Monday.

C. C. Cappel, manager of the orchestra, announced that the final luncheon of the drive will be held Monday noon. At that time summary reports from all committee chairmen will be given. Ralph O. Brewster, former Governor of Maine, and Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the United States Mint, will be guests.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

NEARLY 20,000 Government employes saved more than $600,000 to the end of 1935 through membership in credit unions, according to a report made at the second annual meeting of the D. C. Credit Union League by its president, Victor L. Lowe (P), Bureau of Standards.

BAKER.

Mr. Lowe points out that most of the credit unions in the District paid dividends last year of 40 to 6 per cent on savings and emphasized the fact that loans are aiding hundreds of people to meet emergencies, pay for medical attention, expenses for vacations, school and college attendance.

"By simply putting away 50 cents or a dollar every pay day," Mr. Lowe explains, "many Federal employes are working their way toward real financial security. It is very gratifying to know that by this convenient plan Government employes have saved over $600,000, especially since more than half the members joined credit unions only last year."

The credit union practice committee of the league met this week, under direction of C. D. Franks, Veterans Administration. The necessity of the older organizations assisting the new ones in the solution of their problems was brought out in talks by Mr. Franks and William S. McKinney, of the War Department credit union.

At this meeting Edward J. Jutz, Commerce, reported that 300,000 of the 1,000,000 credit union members of America have joined the national association through their respective leagues.

Clarke J. McLane, Library of Congress, chairman of the league's educational committee, states that his committee is working out the possibilities for a monthly bulletin of credit union activities in Washington. He also says his group will soon issue a bibliography of credit union material available in the libraries for educational purposes.

Wild Life Writers.

An article by Ire N. Gabrielson, chief of the Biological Survey, on "The Correlation of Forestry and Wild Life Management," which appeared in a recent issue of the Journal of Forestry, has been issued in mimeographed form by the bureau and distributed more widely to conservationists and wild life administrators.

I. T. Bode, Biological Survey conservationist, has written a pamphlet on "Co-operation Research in Wild Life Management: A Summary of the Project to February 15, 1935," which is being similarly distributed.

Canning Fish.

Norman D. Jarvis, technologist, and Francis P. Griffiths, bacteriologist, Bureau of Fisheries, have just had published by Commerce their joint report on "The Home Canning of Fishery Products," which will be especially useful to housewives. It contains explicit directions for the home canning of various kinds of fish and of clams and shrimps with illustrations of the apparatus used.

$1.05 an Hour Jobs.

Applications for the position of heat treater will be accepted "until further notice" by the Recorder, Labor Board, Norfolk Navy Yard, Portsmouth, Va. The rate of pay for a 40-hour week ranges from 95 cents to $1.05 an hour.

Applicants must have had at least four years of experience in the processes of heat treating, both ferrous and non-ferrous metals. At least two years of this experience must have been acquired within the past seven years.

Study Sheep Disease.

Proof that the Western sheep disease known as "bighead" may be caused by the poisonous coal oil bush and spineless horsebrush plants has been established by the Department of Agriculture. A. B. Clawson and W. T. Huffman, of the Bureau of Animal Industry, have produced the disease experimentally in more than 25 western sheep by feeding them on the two plants. In the past two years Mr. Clawson and Dr. Huffman have located and mapped many of the "bighead" areas on or near the sheep trails in Utah, Idaho, Nevada and Oregon.

Mr. Clawson, Dr. Huffman and E. A. Moran (C), also of Animal Industry, will return this spring to the Western "bighead" areas to continue their investigations of the disease. They hope to develop more definite measures for preventing outbreaks.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan.

Underneath the Broadway Moon.

New show at the Rainbow Room played its premiere in an unusual setting, a solid boundary of heavy, gray fog that pressed at the glass panels of the Rockefeller night club . . . Generally, the electric pattern of New York, visible through the windows, is equal to the show within the room, with even the light on the Statue of Liberty visible down the harbor, but on Thursday night, the fog couldn't have been sliced with a stiletto . . . The Casa Loma band, Sheila Barrett and Holland and Hart never posed in a more unsual frame . . . The Rainbow Room has been playing to about 1,000 patrons a week, and attracts its own definite clientele, moneyed people from out of town, young married couples from Long Island, Westchester and Connecticut . . . The stiffness and formality of the room has been removed in part, though dress is still formal . . . The revolving dance floor and the electric organ, which controls the lights in the ceiling panels, still are used, but infrequently, because they were a bit too circus-ey . . . It is well worth a visit, and the high-speed elevators lift you from the sidewalk to the sixty-fifth floor in 39 seconds.

Abe Lyman and Lou Brecker, who own 51 per cent of the Hollywood Restaurant, have offered to sell out to Joe Moss for $22,500, or will buy his 49 per cent for the same amount . . . Moss, to date, has made a top bid of $17,500 . . . Block and Sully, married in the Jack Benny home in California eight years ago, celebrated their anniversary with the Jack Bennys a few hours back on the Stem . . . Johnny Green, Burns and Kay, George Metaxa, Benny Rubin and Blossom Seely were in the party . . . Femme dancing instructresses at Arthur Murray's, ranking the ten most popular bachelors in the world, voted this way: King Edward VIII, 32 votes; Clark Gable, 29; Fred MacMurray, 14; Nelson Eddy, 8; Abe Lyman, 7; Robert Donat, 5; F. D. Roosevelt, jr., 4; William Powell, 3; Dick Powell, 2 . . . However, I've been a bit suspicious of polls since Syracuse University co-eas, in a recent vote, ranked me above Fred Astaire and J. Edgar Hoover.

Husky, gray-haired chap ringsiding at Broadway clubs the last few nights is Chicago's famous Capt. Dan Gilbert, chief investigator for the State attorney's office in Cook County . . . Here for the Crime Forum with State Attorney Thomas J. Courtney and Probate Court Clerk Mitchell C. Robin . . . Gilbert, a two-fisted veteran of the Chicago Police Department, with close to 20 years' experience, is idolized by stage performers . . . He broke up the ring of independent hoodlums who made weekly backstage raids on performers booked into Chicago, demanding and getting payoff money . . . Gilbert's detectives methodically pursued these backstage bandits, walloping them so industriously that finally they gave it up as a bad job . . . So, if the Broadway stars made a fuss over the Chicago ace while he was in town, it was completely understandable . . . He rates . . . Billy Bakewell will announce his engagement to Helene Del Valle any minute . . . Gloria Spreckels and Hubie Boscowitz are still cheek-to-cheek . . . Florida gambling ban will shorten the season . . . "House of Morgan" plans to continue after the bankruptcy is acted upon.

*Combination of Mae West and Fred Waring's band at New York Paramount has choked the aisles with traffic . . . They will turn in a staggering $60,000 week, which will represent about 140,000 paid admissions . . . Managing Director Bob Weitman can step up and take a bow on it, because he insisted on the big-name-band policy . . . Frances Williams, blonde thrush, goes stepping with Dave Moscowitz, Jersey district attorney . . . Nick Troilo, brisk Pittsburgher, will handle Victor McLaglen's personal appearance tour . . . He starts him off at Cleveland, week of April 12, for $10,000 . . . Fashion Academy, which rated Gladys Swarthout the best dressed opera canary in 1935, will name Helen Gleason this time . . . Lefty Gomez's wife, the ex-June O'Day, will return to the stage . . . One of her songs will be "I'm the Wife of a Left-handed Pitcher" . . . Add Hands-Across-the-Table: Estell (French Casino) Essex and Wall Streeter John Mayer, Agent Charlie Ross and Patricia Gilmore, Marc Loeb and Marjorie Lynch, Roy Moeschen and Helen Ryan, the model . . . # Art Lovers Will View Acheson-Gates Exhibit

Studio House to Be Rendezvous of Society at Tea and Private Showing Today of Latest Works by Two Popular Washington Artists.

By Vylla Poe Wilson.

Studio House at 1614 Twenty-first street will be the rendezvous this afternoon for art lovers among the members of Washington society for the tea and private view of the paintings of Alice Acheson and Robert Franklin Gates.

The paintings of Alice Acheson, wife of Dean Acheson, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, are as dynamic as she is herself. They have been done with the same originality and individuality for which this popular hostess is noted. Many of them were painted in the Acheson home in Georgetown, which, by the way, is one of its oldest homes, recently remodelled and restored without losing any atmosphere of the quaint town. Secretary and Mrs. Acheson draw about them there men and women of arts and letters, statesmen and a gay group of society folk.

Often one may see Mrs. Acheson walking along Georgetown streets, attired in the smart tweeds of which she is fond, and with sketch book in hand to jot down passing impressions of the town.

"Fine Day" a Feature.

One of the best pictures in the show which opens today is called "Fine Day," and portrays a row of houses in Georgetown's colored section with the population out enjoying the early spring sunshine. Those who regret the passing of several Washington markets will admire Mrs. Acheson's "Market Scene" in which she has painted fruits and flowers in a strikingly original decorative pattern.

Mrs. Acheson's increased mastery in the use of figures in landscapes has been commented on this season by several critics. While most of her paintings in the present show are oils, she is also represented by several excellent water color landscapes.

The virile transparent water colors of Robert Franklin Gates not only have won many prizes, but have acquired quite a vogue among leading Washington art collectors in the past few years. Included in the list of those who own his pictures and have been asked as special guests to today's private opening are Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Mrs. Duncan Phillips, Mrs. Vincent Astor, the Rumanian Minister, Charles Davila, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis and Mr. Olin F. Dows.

Pictures of Washington.

Many of Mr. Gates' paintings, both in water colors and in oils, are of scenes in Washington and its vicinity or at the isolated West Virginia artist colony of which Mr. and Mrs. Gates are members and where they pass their summers. Other paintings have been made on motor trips. Mr. Gates, during the recent unusual winter weather, made a number of pictures at Great Falls. He has developed one painting of Great Falls, ice bound, in bold, contracting cold tones of gray and green.

The exhibition has been arranged along the walls of the double drawing room at Studio House so cleverly that the home atmosphere has been maintained. This arrangement, inspired by C. Law Watkins, director of Studio House and associate director of Phillips Memorial Gallery, enables those visiting the exhibition to visualize how the paintings would fit into a home.

Studio House has become a teatime background for art-minded Washingtonians where discusion of art and politics, as well as the activities of Washington society is enjoyed under the aegis of tea poured by the hostess, Mrs. Robert Franklin Gates, known in the art world as Margaret Casey Gates, herself a master in the use of water color.

TWO ON SAFARI

By GEORGE AGNEW CHAMBERLAIN

Ballard Mallory, young American explorer in search of the young Honorable Laurence Morland, lost in the African jungle, is accompanied by an enigmatic English girl, Josephine Cascodes. At a hotel in Lourenco Marques she receives a cable that distresses her, and in the shop of Ibn-ben-Dur, the name "Morland" causes her momentarily to lose her poise. Mallory believes Morland has become a bandit. In camp, Mallory suddenly kisses Josephine.

Chapter XXII.

Fingers That Touch.

"YOU KNOW," Ballard said, "we won't be traveling along from one shamba to another; where we're going they'll be gone."

"What are they?" Josephine asked.

"The communal patches of tilled soil surrounding every native village."

"Then you do know where we're going," she murmured in a half statement.

"Only vaguely," he answered after a pause. "I know the general region."

"Is it far?"

"The answer to that depends on a lot of things—how soon we strike the broad trail, how fresh it happens to be where we hit it, and how fast the quarry is traveling."

"Quarry?" she asked quickly.

He looked her straight in the eyes, his own filled with a vision of Morland's trail—a trail of destruction, of drunken orgies dotted with mutilated bodies, ravaged shambas and women, and of youths enslaved. Was this the moment to tell her?

"Yes," he answered, "quarry is the word."

Though he was ready to face the issue, apparently she was not. Shocked by the force and readiness of his answer she recoiled. Her eyes first wavered then deliberately turned from his. As is the privilege and the art of woman she executed a complete reversal.

"If you've got to stock the larder, why don't you get at it?" she asked pleasantly. "What are you waiting for?"

Life Is Humdrum.

"It's too late and too early; the game won't begin to stir again for hours."

"What is there to do in the meantime?"

"Nothing. It's a day of rest, and believe me we've earned it—men, horses and women. Lie around, sleep; later on you can put on your clothes and take a stroll."

"Alone?"

"If you like."

"Aren't there any lions or snakes?" she asked with a touch of disappointment.

"There are, but the chances are a hundred to one you won't see any. Even if you did, they'd be running the other way."

"What if I get lost?"

"You can't. Your syce's name is Bongo. Whenever you get tired call him and ride home."

"Things really are simple, as you promised, aren't they?" she said, raising her eyes to find his fixed upon her.

"That sort of thing—yes," he answered. "But there are others not so simple. I'm sorry about what happened."

"When?"

"I'm apologizing for last night—for kissing you once as if you were a child and again as if you were a woman."

"Oh!"

"Are you pretending you had forgotten?"

"No, but you needn't feel particularly sorry as far as I'm concerned."

"I don't; I'm sorry for myself—for having made a fool of myself both times."

"You did, in a way," she admitted coolly, "but there's really nothing to worry about. That sort of thing——"

She left the phrase unfinished; he waited and grew impatient.

"Well?"

She looked down at the curling blue smoke from her cigarette. "Nobody can touch me unless I wish to be touched," she said, speaking slowly and distinctly, as if for her own sake as well as his.

Her security was so complete it embraced him, restoring his own self-confidence. He sat studying her and himself with a new clairvoyance. They were safe because she walked beside him, never with him. He stared at her left hand, lying lax. If he was right, they could touch and not touch, hold hands and feel nothing. Leaning forward, he slipped his palm beneath her long fingers and with his other hand began to smooth them gently.

An Awakening.

They lay quiescent; the tiny pulse in her wrist throbbing on unchanged, neither slow nor quick. Then, without warning, he felt her blood leap as though it would burst its way out through their tips. She snatched her fingers away and sprang to her feet. He was conscious of a surge of exultation deep within himself, but before he had time to identify it he looked up. Promptly the hot flow in his own veins turned cold. She was staring straight ahead with an intensity which excluded him, wiped him out. He tasted the bitter ashes of nonexistence and rebelled. Now was his chance. Ask her—say it: "By the way, what is Laurence Morland to you?" He did not dare.

She turned and left him as though walking in her sleep, for the leap of her blood had surprised her as much as it had him. Like the blow of a hammer it had wakened her to realization of how far she had strayed out of her reserve.

All forms of betrayal confused her and, in the afternoon, while he was busy with his guns, she plunged off into the forest, hoping to find her lost bearings. Somewhere behind her Bongo with Swayback was undoubtedly following, but even had he been at her side she could still have felt alone.

The fallen leaves of the izonzo trees formed a vast carpet that crepitated under her feet with the tinkle of infinitesimal slivers of glass. Billions of fallen leaves and yet the leafy dome above remained unbroken. Beneath it were arches—innumerable arches draped with pale green moss hanging in long streamers that scarcely stirred. She was in a cathedral, a huge cloistered space that invited mind and eye to a wide range. Here she could see clearly—not the trunks of nearby trees, but things far away.

She picked out only one, Ballard. All else—drab Red Lion Square, the stuffy taxi, poor old Mr. Jones and what he had said—became mere props and backdrop. In memory she saw Mallory emerge from the doorway on which her eyes were glued, carrying his outlandish hat.

That had been his beginning—his visual beginning. He had looked exactly as she had expected, consequently her interest had been limited strictly to identification, to making sure she would know him again. Divergence had begun later. When? She remembered with a shock the evening she had shrunk from his touch. Because of what she believed of him her revulsion had been genuine. Then what had happened, since no circumstance was changed? How had she arrived at the ridiculous position of trying to straddle between shore and a slowly receding boat? For that was her present case. While one foot still stood firm on her intention to use him as impersonally as if he were a blind man's dog, the other had drifted off into a friendship that could hold hands in the morning!

She was ashamed. If there was a guiding principle in her life it was to see where she was going and to walk straight. Immorality was not a thing of the body but of the spirit. She hated subterfuge with a wholesome hatred and regarded a flirt as a plain cheat. What must he think of her?

Then she did care now? Yes, or she wouldn't be worrying about it. Without necessarily caring for him she had at least arrived at the point of caring what he thought. She perceived that a change of some sort was involved—either a change in Mallory or in her conception of him—and stood quite still until she could give it a name. No longer was he any American or a blind man's dog; he was an individual, a man, and she was a woman. She nodded her head twice, then held it erect; that was that, and she felt a lot better.

Into the stillness, from far away, came a shot and then another and another in rapid sucession. That was Ballard, filling the larder. To her surprise she felt no squeamish re-action, only an odd conviction that what he did must be right. She turned, intending to retrace her steps, but immediately all directions became one.

There was no choice—none; to her inexpert eye her latest footsteps had left no telltale mark on the endles copper-glinting carpet. The trees, so alike, differed only in size. Her heart sank with the panicky feeling of the lost, then she remembered Bongo. She picked a large trunk for cover, stood close to it and amused herself with waiting for him. Moments passed. Then—without sound, without warning—a picture stood before her, filled her eyes to overbrimming.

British Gloves Of Doeskin Hol Their New Look

By Ruth Anne Davis.

FROM THE British Isles come some ageless gloves that never lose their brand new look. They are made of the finest quality of doeskin by leather craftsmen who understand deft tailoring and smartness. You will find some in the new shade, "luggage tan," a rich but constructive tan to wear with black, tan or gray. They come in hand-stitched and plain machine finish.

Those shown in a Connecticut avenue shop are called "wear clean" gloves, since they actually wear clean. This is due to the fact that the leather contains a special powder which prevents soil from penetrating. Any surface soil is removed readily with a dry rubber sponge.

You might pay a tiny speck more for these gloves than you do others, but they'll wear you twice as long and three times as well.

Coolie Coats.

THOSE of you who are finding your flannel robes a little warmish this balmy weather might be interested in the specially priced silk coolie coats selling for $1.09.

They come in white, red and blue with vari-colored embroidered flowers. At the rate they're selling you'd better hurry!

Magnifying Mirrors.

IT'S ALMOST impossible to make up properly without a handy mirror. Certainly those in an F street shop are a big help. They're fitted into little metal frames that hold them upright on your dressing table.

One side of the mirror is magnifying, the other plain. The price? Twenty cents!

Peanut Season Opens.

MAYBE it's the spring of the year that's responsible. At any rate it seems that peanuts right now are gaining in popularity by leaps and bounds.

According to one shop that makes a specialty of peanuts it's amazing the number of men and women who stop by for their nickel or 10 cent bag on the way home in the afternoon. And astounding the number of hostesses who are ordering them by the pound. Evidently there's a peanut vogue under way. And certain peanuts are excellent blotters to serve at a cocktail session.

At any rate, this shop has fresh nuts—and-oh-so-delicious! . . . every day just dares you to try them and not double your order!

Buys Her Clothes in 'Vibration Colors'

Clothes of June Knight Based on Numerology

"Vibration Colors" Year in and Year Out Explained by Actress; Yellow and Heliotrope Fit Her Personality.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WEARING WHAT "THEY'RE wearing" each season, studying fashions and buying Paris frocks is not so important as your own attitude toward your clothes. That, at least, is the theory of June Knight, personable dancer-singer-actress now appearing at a Washington theater.

Miss Knight solves the problem by dressing in her "vibration colors." Some time ago, it seems, her aunt worked it all out for her by taking her birth date, counting the number of vowels in her name and figuring out the vibrations by numerology. By this means the aunt discovered black, white, heliotrope and yellow bring out the best points in Miss Knight's personality.

"So you'll find all those, and few other colors in my wardrobe," she said yesterday in her suite at the Carlton. "This is not bad for me," she added, fingering the powder blue silk of her lounging pajamas, "but I feel much more at home in one of my vibration shades."

She had just finished rehearsing one of her dance steps when the reporter and photographer arrived. It was almost time for her to dress to go to the theater. No, she had no qualms about beginning her local engagement on Friday 13th "because even though I'm terribly superstitious, that has always been lucky for me. Besides, my costumes are in the right vibration and besides," she added, a twinkle in her eye, "I have my charm bracelet with me."

The maid brought the latter out for display. It is a yard-long chain, with numerous tiny objects dangling from it. There are 60 in all, she said, including miniature pitchers, vases, monkeys, a flat iron, a small Mahatma Gandhi (bearing a pearl in his arms), a gold carriage with the Dionnes peeping out, silver boxes and hearts, some set with precious stones, others elaborately carved.

"Collecting charms is my pet hobby," she said. "I've done it for years. I know only two persons who have more than I do—Constance Bennett and Rose Franken.

Like Neysa McMein, the artist who is convinced fame rests largely on the right number of vowels and consonants in one's appellative, June Knight believes she would never have gone far in her career if she had tried to take her original name—Margaret Rose Vallliquett—along with her.

Took New Name.

"That handle is much too long, hard to pronounce and difficult to remember," she said. "So the first thing I did when I started my dancing career was to change it to "Marie Valli." That was better. But when I became Jack Holland's partner, he wanted me to change again to 'June Knight.' From that minute on, my star started rising."

She admitted, however, she gets pretty tired of the latter name because it so frequently invites a play on words and too often recalls the old song, "Oh Give Me a June Night."

Probably few persons on stage or screen have higher ambitions than this California girl who had a motion picture contract before she went places on Broadway, and who now has an arrangement whereby she can divide her time between the East and West Coast. She confided she is working hard to be an excellent actress, singer and dancer.

Writes Novels.

"Then, on the side," she continued, "I'd like to write novels and illustrate them myself," she said. "You know this stage-screen business is primarily a youth's game. No matter how good you get, there's always somebody coming up who can take your place. I'd like to have something a bit more permanent to fall back on. So I've already started writing. I'm working on a couple of stories now. And as for illustrating, well I've been doing that for years."

What were some of her ideas on marriage?

"Oh, everyone ought to marry—certainly," she replied. "I plan to, again, sometime. But right now I'm too busy to even think about it."

She began studying dancing when she was 11, she said. "I was a sickly child; had paralysis when I was very small and every ailment any baby can have. Now I'm strong as an ox. You know why? Because dancing has strengthened my muscles, has brought me good health and keeps me in trim year in and year out. No wonder I'm so fond of it."

Tap Dancing Popular In University Class

Larry Griswold is the instructor and he has 115 students in his five classes.

Five years ago when tap dancing was added to the curriculum only 15 students enrolled.

Table Games Teach Children To Know Foods

Browns Find Innovation Also Helps to Ease Dinner Tension.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

THE Browns have a new table game. Table games are a specialty in the family, for they can be made to include even the youngest and keep conversation from being one-sided or degenerating into lessons in manners.

The game started when Mr. Brown found that his younger children could not distinguish between the various kinds of meat. Lamb, veal and pork were alike to them, and whether the cut of beef was roast beef, beef steak, or pot roast was also a puzzle.

Enjoyed by Children.

So every time the family sat down to a meal, each child was required to name the meat before he was served. The children enjoyed this and soon were expert at recognizing kinds and cuts. Then a new sort of question arose. Where did the animal come from?

Today the game is established and has grown farther-reaching as the children have grown older. Everything on the table is the object of investigation. The members of the family vie with each other in finding out where silver, linen, decorations and food come from, and have in many cases gone into the history of their earliest origins. The game has reached out into geography and science and become an added incentive to school work.

Relieves Monotony.

Of course the Browns do not play the game every time they are at dinner. Nor has it ever been permitted to become a strain on nerves and brain. Father and mother are not teachers. Often they too can be found hunting up some obscure question so that they may not be outdone by the children.

On occasions where conversation languishes, or a discussion seems imminent, or malicious gossip is current, one of the Browns' games is generally suggested to save the day and keep the meal from becoming unpleasantly personal.

'Mamma Monopoly' Blamed by Adler In Youth Phobias

"MONOPOLIZING mammas" are to blame for the large number of young neurotics and delinquents of today, in the opinion of Dr. Alfred Adler, Viennese psychiatrist.

Dr. Adler is quoted by the Associated Press as saying that mothers of today assume too much control over the interests of their children, with the result that the children are dependent, introverted and selfish. He described young people of the present as being too self-centered, suffering from metnal confusoin, phobias and foolish ideas.

"They have an inferiority complex," he said, "which involves not being able to solve social problems. Often such young men have derived every thought from their mothers and will make no move unless mother tells them what to do."

MARY HAWORTH Says:

Early Weeks and Months of Marriage Are in Many Respects the Most Difficult Period of All; First Rule for Success Is Patience, and More Patience.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married just five weeks. Sunday my heart was broken. I cried all night—because my husband wants to continue a love affair with a girl in another State. He has written her an endearing letter and is planning to visit her this week-end. He says he is not going to tell her he is married for fear he will hurt her. I have waited so long for the happiness of the past five weeks and to have it crushed so soon is breaking my heart. Please tell me what I must say to my husband.

MRS. A. W. J.

* * * *

DEAR MRS. A. W. J.: Your failure to give any kind of picture of yourself, your husband and your respective backgrounds, on the one hand; and of events leading up to your recent marriage and your still more recent heartbreak, on the other, makes it almost impossible for any adviser to lend you a helping hand in the peculiar crisis which has arisen.

* * * *

However, your inarticulate wail leads me to believe both of you are young, ignorant and inexperienced; that neither of you has been married before and consequently are embarked on a presumable life partnership together without knowing the first principles of what makes for success in this relationship. What are those first principles? I should say the first rule is patience; and the second rule, more patience.

* * * *

First, then, sit down quietly alone and give yourself over to a period of meditation and honest self-examination. Review in minute detail all that has transpired between your husband and yourself since the day and hour of your marriage. Try to discover if and in what way you have failed your husband or bitterly disappointed him in any respect. The early weeks and months of any marriage are in many respects the most difficult period of all—for they represent the period during which radical readjustments from past ways of thinking, speaking, acting and even feeling and believing must be made in order to approach the ideal of two persons becoming one.

* * * *

Such necessary adjustment is far from an easy task even for those who come to the job with some knowledge of what is required of them. It is even more difficult for those who are ignorant and mentally unprepared. Your husband may have done a rather poor best to make a go of marriage, but be suffering at present from a sense of defeat and failure; and rather than confess himself defeated or at a loss, be tempted to throw blame for present failure on your shoulders and run away to another woman for consolation and reassurance.

Here's Husband Who Is Difficult to Classify.

UNDENIABLY, THERE IS SOMETHING startling to the point of being shocking about your husband's avowed intention to renew a love affair with another woman—a woman from whom he proposes to withhold information of his recent marriage. With only that to go on in classifying him, and no more, one cannot decide whether he is a scoundrel, a cad, a moron, or simply a forthright if wholly undisciplined young whippersnapper.

If, however, you still see in him material which might eventually make a responsible husband; and if your honest self-analysis leads you to believe one or the other or both of you have been at fault in bringing the present crisis to pass, I suggest you make one last, gallant effort to save your marriage—but only one.

* * * *

Open a conversation with your husband by telling him you have gone over carefully in your own mind the whole history of your marriage. Tell him, in gentle and friendly fashion, the ways in which, as you see it, both of you have failed and are failing to present yourselves to each other in the most favorable light as husband and wife. Ask for his opinions and encourage an objective-minded discussion of the subject. Let him bring his resentments and his reservations and his conflicts into the open. Tell him you realize it will take time and patience and mutual effort to iron out your differences and smooth away your difficulties, but that you are eagerly willing, with his co-operation, to make the effort necessary.

* * * *

Then tell him, with quiet and complete finality, that he must choose now between you and the girl with whom he proposes to renew a past love affair. I realize this will be a courageous step for you to take. I know you must dread the possibility of his answering: "Oh, is that so? All right, then. If I must choose, I choose the other girl." But in spite of that possibility, I urge you to put the choice definitely up to him. If your marriage has a ghost of a chance of surviving, he will choose you. If he chooses the other girl, you will only be dealt a bitter truth that eventually you would have had to take account of, anyway. It is better for you to have the whole truth from his lips now, than to gather it slowly in painful fragments from his actions.

Wear More Color, Advice of Stylist

Bright Hues Are Leading in New Spring Fashions.

By Frances Mangum.

AMERICAN WOMEN in their search for youth are turning more and more to color in their costumes.

"And not only that," declared Miss Marjorie Holligan, stylist of the Celanese Corporation of America, and originator of this season's popular Van Gogh prints, "not only that—they are yearly becoming more color conscious!

"They realize at last that colors, and combinations of colors are flattering. They bring out the charm of their eyes, hair and skin. They're gay, these colors—and they're youthful!"

"Over a period of years," she said, "I have watched color attain its important niche in the fashion world. Not that it hasn't always been important but never to the extent that it is now.

"I can remember a time," she continued, "when women weren't at all careful about matching or contrasting their costume colors. They might wear a blue dress, brown hat, and black shoes and feel perfectly well dressed."

In her opinion that time is definitely gone because women have found at last how cleverly they can "play colors" for style effects.

"They have also discovered how economical colors can be," she added.

"People used to think that black, or brown clothes were the most sensible because you didn't tire of them quickly. A variety of colors in a costume are regarded as infinitely practical."

As she explained it, a print dress combining three or four colors lends itself to a variety of accessories and can with a change of hat, gloves, bag, and possibly scarf, become two or three costumes instead of one.

Some of the leading color combinations employed by Miss Holligan in spring and summer prints were taken directly from Vincent van Goghs paintings. For instance, from his picture called "Iris" there is blue, sulphur, orchid, and periwinkle. From another, "Laurier's Roses," there is gray, rose, pink, citron, and sulphur. Particularly striking are the three colors taken from his painting, "The Cloister Garden at Arles," chartreuse, blue, and red, and also green, red, gold and chartreuse from "The Vase of Sunflowers."

Lent Provides Food Surprise Opportunities

Palatable Substitutes for Meat Augment Egg, Salad Dishes.

LENT OFFERS the housewife unlimited opportunity to provide food surprises for her family. The wide range that meat substitute dishes may take was illustrated in the entries received in The Post's food contest of last week. Besides the usual egg and fish dishes there are all sorts of interesting and appetizing meat substitutes that can be prepared from nuts, cereals, cheese and vegetables.

Six of the most unusual recipes received, all of which have been awarded honorable mention in the contest, are presented today as follows:

Peanut Roast.

3 tablespoons chopped celery
2 tablespoons chopped onion
1¾ cups chopped peanuts
1½ cups bread crumbs
Salt and pepper
2 tablespoons lemon or orange juice
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup hot water
2 eggs
½ cup mashed vegetables

Pan fry the celery and onion in the fat until tender and brown. Add the hot water and simmer five minutes. Combine the remaining ingredients and mix with the celery and onion. Form into a loaf and place in a buttered baking dish. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 40 minutes. Serve hot with tomato sauce.

EDNA ZEMER.
Box 655, Benjamin Franklin Station.

Soya Bean Chop Suey.

1 large can soya beans
2 small green peppers
2 medium size ripe tomatoes
4 to 6 small white onions
small bunch parsley
3 to 4 tablespoons olive oil
salt and pepper to taste

Use heavy skillet with lid. Heat oil and add chopped onions, peppers and parsley; let brown until nearly done. Add tomatoes which have been chopped, medium pieces and seasoning. Then add soya beans and mix well, place cover on skillet and let simmer for about 15 minutes.

1818 Irving street northwest.

Noodle Casserole.

1 package of egg noodles
1 can cream of mushroom soup
1 can of tuna fish
2 boiled eggs
Pepper and salt to taste

Boil noodles in salted water until tender. Drain and put in a casserole, mixing thoroughly with the tuna fish. Pour contents of mushroom soup on top. Bake for twenty minutes in a moderate oven.

Remove from oven. Slice boiled eggs and spread over the top. Bake for another ten minutes. This recipe will serve six.

MRS. F. ZIEGELASCH.
1005 H street northwest.

Creole Pudding.

½ pint milk
½ pint water
1 cup grits or cornmeal (yellow preferred)
2 eggs
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon butter
½ cup grated cheese
1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley
1 teaspoon onion juice
½ teaspoon baking powder

Make thin mush of cornmeal and liquids. Beat in butter, salt, cheese and egg yolks. Add parsley and onion. Then pour over stiffly beaten whites with baking powder added. Pour into baking dish and bake in moderate own about 40 minutes. Serve hot with butter.

JOAN ALLISON.
2204 Fourteenth street northwest.

Spinach Cheese Souffle.

3 tablespoons quick cooking tapioca
1 cup grated cheese
3 egg whites, stiffly beaten with 1 teaspoon salt
1 cup cooked spinach finely chopped
1 cup milk, scaledd
3 egg yolks, beaten until thick and lemon colored

Add tapioca to milk and cook in double boiler 15 minutes, or until tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Add grated cheese, stir until melted. Cool. Add egg yolks and mix well. Add spinach. Fold in egg whites. Bake in a greased baking dish, placed in a pan of hot water, in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 50 minutes, or 30 minutes in ramekins. This souffle is done when it shrinks slightly and is brown.

MRS. C. W. CLEVER.
1544 North Edgewood street, Clarendon, Va.

Cottage Cheese Nut Loaf.

1 cup cottage cheese
1 cup chopped pecans
1 cup bread crumbs
2 tablespoons chopped onion
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon salt
Pinch of pepper

Combine the cottage cheese, nuts, bread crumbs, lemon juice, salt and pepper. Mix with onion, which has been cooked in butter and a little water until tender. Bake in a loaf pan in moderate oven until brown.

Blue and Gray Mark New York Fashion Parade

'Suits With Sables,' Trim of Raspberry Are Among Gotham Displays.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 13.—A parade of navy blue and gray stretched from the Empire State Tower to Central Park this week when Manhattan's department store windows blossomed with spring attire.

All along Fifth avenue, blue and gray suits were the theme, with frothy blouses, bright gloves and gay sprigs of artificial flowers for accent.

Several stores filled every window with dark blue, each accessorizing it with a different color.

Suits With Sables.

"Suits with sables" was one store window slogan. There, each suit shown was paired with a sable scarf.

Gray with raspberry was another favorite color combination. A smart shop displayed a dozen suits of raspberry wool, with gray furs and gray suede shoes.

Crisp jabots, frosty with lace, frothed over many suits at the neckline. A gray laee one appeared on an all-gray ensemble, and the mannequin even had gray hair.

The shade variously known as "British tan," "Haitian tan" and "rust" was the predominant shoe shade, but there were many of dark blue kid, and gray ranked next.

New Lapel Decorations.

Among the new lapel decorations were purple clover, violets, frosty plums and crabapple on sharkskin suits, and mimosa on gray flannel.

Every Woman's Dream—the Perfect Frosting

Smooth and spreadable, soft but never runny, perfect flavor, easy to make—these are the most important qualities attributed to the frosting that is being swirled atop the cake pictured above. The next time you set out to prepare a chocolate frosting that you want to be fool-proof and perfect, try the sweetened condensed milk method described in the accompanying story.

Cakes Are Only Perfect When Frosting Is Right

By Dorothea Duncan.

SMOOTH, CREAMY, light—not one but all of these words must describe the perfect chocolate frosting.

Every woman has her idea of how she should go about obtaining these results. One may cook her favorite batch of fudge for a cake topping, only to find that this frosting is a little too heavy or it cracks when the cake is cut. Another may add a bit of shaved chocolate to her recipe for seven-minute frosting. Perhaps this venture is a success, and again it may be that the frosting is made runny by the oil in the chocolate.

There always are the uncooked frostings on which to fall back but some persons prefer a cooked frosting, because there is a difference in texture which the discriminating taste can tell.

There must be some way to certain success in making a perfect chocolate frosting for the discriminating person who prefers a cooked icing. Expert cooks have found the answer to this problem very simple, for they use sweetened condensed milk as the basis for their chocolate frosting. This type of frosting is actually fool-proof. It is creamy, smooth and light. It will spread evenly over the surface of your cake. It will stay fresh and moist until the last crumb of the cake is eaten, and it won't fall off the cake when the slices are cut.

After all, these are just a few of the minor advantages of the sweetened condensed milk chocolate frosting. Its perfect flavor will win favor with everyone, and the ease with which it is prepared will charm the busy housewife. Try it for your next chocolate layer cake. This type of frosting is especially recommended for the filling, top and sides of gold or white cake. The recipe follows:

Those who like their flavors will find the second receipe—caramel chocolate frosting—a delicious cake topping, especially if the flavor is spice.

Chocolate Frosting.

2 squares unsweetened chocolate
1 1-3 cups sweetened condensed milk.
1 tablespoon water.

Melt chocolate in top of double boiler. Add sweetened condensed milk; stir over boiling water 5 minutes until it thickens. Add water; cool. Spread on cold cake. Makes enough frosting to cover top and sides of two 9-inch layers or top and sides of loaf cake generously, or about 24 cup cakes.

Caramel Chocolate Frosting.

1 square unsweetened chocolate.
1 can sweetened condensed milk, caramelized.

Melt chocolate in top of double boiler. Add caramelized sweetened condensed milk and stir over boiling water 5 minutes until it thickens. Cool. Spread on cold cakes. Makes enough frosting to cover top and sides of two 9-inch layers or top and sides of loaf cake generously, or about 24 cup cakes.

To caramelize sweetened condensed milk, place unopened can in kettle of boiling water and keep it at boiling point for three hours. Be sure to keep can well covered with water. Several cans may be caramelized at a time and kept on hand. Chill before serving, and serve for dessert with whipped cream or fruits or nuts.

Gelatin Salad Recipe Prizes Are Offered

SPRING DAYS bring a longing for lighter, gayer food. And what fills that description so perfectly as a gelatin salad? What other salad offers such an opportunity for interesting food combinations and attractive color schemes.

Six $1 prizes for the best recipes for gelatin salads will be awarded in The Post's third weekly recipe contest to be held next week. Winners of these prizes also will be eligible for the four grand prizes to be given at the end of the recipe tournament, the week after Easter.

The grand prizes include an electric waffle set, of non-tarnishing chromium iron with matching tray, sirup pitcher, deep batter bowl and ladle, an electric iron, scorchproof, which has a switch indicating the proper heat for every kind of fabric; an electrically heated casserole, which also serves as a utility pan for the kitchen, and an electric clock.

If you enter your best or most unusual recipe for gelatin salad in next week's contest you will have two chances to win a prize. You may get one of the $1 awards and also one of the grand prizes.

Mail your recipe so that it will reach Dorothea Duncan, food editor of The Post, not later than next Saturday morning.

Pleasant Homes

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

WHILE THIS young man pitches his toys out of his play pen as fast as his parents can put them back in for him, the parents themselves are trying to get time in between to make a nice nursery for him. Being somewhat inexperienced as bosses of somebody so little, they started out by buying every gadget on the market for babies. And the traffic in the nursery became very congested indeed. Now they are weeding out the unnecessaries and making a place for the very soon when their little son will be walking and yanking and getting into everything that's get-into-able. Naturally it's important to have all decks clear by then!

Anyway they've discovered that they really need and use: the crib, a chifferobe, a bookcase for his toys, a screen to keep the drafts off, a tray with his bath things in it, a small easy chair for his mother, a cot in the nursery for someone to sleep near when he's not well, his play pen (he doesn't use this long, but it's terribly needed while he does use it), a kiddie car. He's just recently graduated from his little bathinette to the big bath tub . . . but while he was the right age for it, the bathinette was indispensible.

And pretty soon he'll be needing a little chair of his own with a tray for his food . . . at least they're hoping he'll use this, though his little cousin who's just a year older than he is never would use either a high or a low chair to eat in! Well, he has inherited hers, so he will have a chance to try them out at least. And he seems to be enjoying all the to-do that's being made over him.

Today's HEALTH TALK

Children's Ailments.

CHILDREN react to upsets much more quickly and severely than adults The nervous system is more delicate and responds without delay to insults that would be borne easily by older persons. We may even see convulsions attended with a high temperature in the presence of mild infections that would scarcely cause a grownup's temperature to go above 99 degrees F.

Newborn babies sometimes exhibit a fever which is due in most cases not to a disease but to lack of water. This is likely to take place during the first two or three days after birth and before the mother's milk appears. Unless water is administered in sufficient quantities the temperature will invariably rise and may reach as high as 103 degrees F. As soon as fluids are given the reaction abates and the child returns to normal.

Teething is frequently responsible for a rise in temperature. If the teeth are giving trouble the child may refuse food and become irritable, restless, and feverish. Examination of the mouth will usually disclose swollen red gums. Apparently absorption from this area is sufficient to bring about an increase in body heat, although teething as a cause should not be accepted until other factors have been investigated and ruled out. Symptoms generally quiet down as soon as the tooth appears.

Ear Trouble Difficult.

Ear trouble—that is, bacteria in the middle ear—is often difficult to diagnose, as very young children are not able to indicate the exact location of the pain. If the physician examines the ear drum it may be found to be bulging and red, indicating pressure (from pus) within the middle ear. All too often the first symptom is a discharging ear due to rupture of the drum

Throat infections are probably the most common forerunners of temperature. Bacteria find ready lodgment in the mucous membrane in this region, and even in the absence of acute tonsilitis the throat may be reddened and swollen and present a roughened, pebbly appearance. Such a picture is nearly always associated with a high fever and is important from every point of view, particularly because kidney inflammation, rheumatism, or abscess in the middle ear may ensue. Because there are no white patches on the tonsils we are likely to assume that a red throat means little. On the contrary, it is as important as any disease that the child may face.

Watch Infections.

Urinary infections are oftentimes overlooked. Pus coming from the kidney will give rise to chills and fever and may not be detected unless a thorough examination of the urine is made. The condiiton should be relieved as speedily as possible, because abscesses may form in the substance of the kidneys and thus destroy some of this important tissue. In what is known as recurrent fever the child will complain of listlessness for a day or two and thereafter will appear extremely pale with a badly coated tongue and an offensive breath. Then will come a rise in temperature lasting three or four days. This period, as a rule, limits the acute attack and the child may be free from fever for several weeks. Thereafter, on the slightest upset—digestive or emotional—the fever may reappear with a repetition of the illness every few weeks. A most careful investigation should be made of the patient's food habits, rest periods, etc.

Experience with rheumatic conditions has demonstrated that a persistent, low-grade temperature may accompany a smoldering infection of the lining of the heart—endocarditis. If the heart is involved there will usually be unmistakable signs of heart disease.

THESE FACTS ABOUT BRAN HAVE BEEN PROVED BY TESTS

Supplies Gently Acting "Bulk" to Aid Regular Habits

Now and then, in talking with your friends, the subject of bran has come up. So that real facts might replace unsupported opinions, the Kellogg Company has aided for some years research in leading nutrition laboratories.

Studies made on a group of healthy women showed that two tablespoonfuls of bran daily continued to relieve constipation* over a period of months. How different from cathartics—where dosage often must be increased.

Another series of tests on men indicated that, with some people, the "bulk" in bran was much more effective than that found in fruits and vegetables.

Further tests showed that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provided vitamin B and iron as well as "bulk." This "bulk" absorbs moisture, and gently exercises and cleanses the system — the right way to correct constipation.

Serve ALL-BRAN regularly for regularity. Either as a cereal, with milk or cream, or in cooked dishes. It is a natural laxative food. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

*Constipation due to insufficient "bulk."

Expert Urges Knick-Knacks Be Discarded

Interior Decorator Favors Clean Sweep of Gadgets to Improve House.

THE WISE HOUSEWIFE, whose fancy even now is turning to spring cleaning, will discard all bric-a-brac, all small vases and decorative knick-knacks that have cluttered up her house for years and made dusting difficult and visitors uncomfortable. She will also do away with all "museum-piece furniture" and replace those eighteenth century chairs and sofas with some low, thickly-cushioned affairs that invite a lot of lolling.

That is the opinion of Marianna von Allesch, interior decorator with a Washington store, who is convinced the keynotes of modern beauty in home furnishing are simplicity, harmony and restraint.

"Yes, I know it takes a lot of courage to make a clean sweep of all the gadgets you've had around for years," she said yesterday. "But your home will be twice as attractive without all those purely ornamental pieces that are as outmoded as hoop skirts."

Mme. Von Allesch also has some pertinent advice on "household accessories." She prefers Venetian blinds to the others, "not only because they are more in keeping with the modern trend, but because they are more sanitary and attractive than other shades."

She believes much care should be given to selecting draperies; that solid colors very near the shade of the walls are preferable if there are many windows in a room.

"But if there is only one, it should be treated as a big picture," she said. "It should have a drapery of strong color, perhaps with a design, fashioned so that it provides a suitable frame."

"What about walls? And pictures?" she was asked.

"Plain walls and good pictures, and not too many of the latter," she replied. "You shouldn't have paintings, oil paintings and prints glued on the walls like stamps. Arrange them in relation to the furniture, and leave enough free space so you can look at a bare wall now and then, and rest your eyes."

She believes moldings and panels are the last remnants of columns and should be removed.

"There is no reason for either," she said. "Panels are particularly difficult because they rule the placing of your furniture. Since they are always symmetrical, every piece in the room will be arranged accordingly. Every artist knows you want balance for beauty, but that symmetrical arrangements are necessary. You want your room to be balanced, but not symmetrical."

As for rugs, Mme. Alesch favors those of "twist weave in solid colors or simple patterns, depending on the furniture."

St. Patrick's Day Hint Is Offered

Calavos Provide Green for Tables.

Calavos offer a natural and obvious solution to the problem of how to supply St. Patrick's Day menus with an edible green symbol of the day. From cocktail to dessert this green-edged fruit will serve to connect the menu to the March color scheme, if in no other way than as garnish for the course.

If calavos are to be used as garnish, sprinkle cut surfaces with lemon juice and salt; otherwise, combine calavos with sea foods, light meats, fruits or vegetables in cocktails, salads, entrees or desserts to add flavor and give point to the desired color scheme.

A unique and delightful way of sticking to the green color theme for the salad course is that of serving half of a calavo, peeled, so that the green outer edge is allowed to show its utmost for the cause. Place the peeled half calavo on a bed of garnish, slice lengthwise into four or five slices and separate slices slightly. Sprinkle with lemon juice and salt. Serve thousand island dressing or some variation of it separately.

Buffet Supper May Be Spoiled By Wrong Food

Chicken Loaf Is Suggested as Suitable Dish for Such a Meal.

TO THE HOMEMAKER whose strength and equipment often make it impossible and unwise to entertain more than one or two guests at a single time, serving a meal buffet style is a happy solution. It is a type of service that enables her to entertain even a large number of guests at one time with a minimum of effort and time.

With chicken a general favorite, nothing could be more appropriate for the piece de resistance than that kind of meat prepared in a dish which meets the requirements of the buffet table. Such a dish might be chicken loaf or pudding. The fowl may be prepared the day before by simmering in water to cover until tender. In addition to the customary salt add a few celery leaves or trimmings, a small onion and one or two cloves for additional flavor. Cool in the stock. A part of the stock will be useful as a basis for the accompanying sauce.

4 pounds fowl, cooked tender and meat diced
2 cups fresh bread crumbs
1 cup cooked rice
1½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons chopped pimento
3 cups liquid, stock or milk or both
4 eggs, beaten

Prepare chicken as suggested above by cooking at a low temperature. Mix all ingredients together and place in a well-greased baking dish. Bake one hour or longer in a slow oven (325 degrees F.). The time will depend upon the depth of the mixture and the size of the dish. When a knife inserted into the center comes out clean, the pudding is cooked. It may be better to bake in smaller pans rather than one large one. This will facilitate service and assure a hot food throughout the meal. Serve with mushroom sauce made as follows:

¼ cup butter
¼ pound fresh mushrooms, or 1 medium-sized can
¼ cup flour
2 cups chicken broth
½ cup cream
⅛ teaspoon pepper
⅛ teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon chopped parsley
1 teaspoon lemon juice
Salt to taste

Cook mushrooms in the melted butter for about five minutes. Add flour and stir until flour is well-blended. Add chicken broth and stir constantly until thickened. Add remaining ingredients. Taste and add more seasoning, if necessary. Keep hot over hot water.

Elderly Urged To Scale Down High Calories

Those Hale and Hearty Should Avoid Weight, U. S. Bureau Says.

WHAT GRANDPA and grandma should eat has at last received some attention from experts, who heretofore have concerned themselves chiefly with the diet needs of Junior.

Two sets of dietary recommendations, one for the elderly who are still hale and hearty and one for those who are actually old, have been drawn up by the Bureau of Home Economics.

Warning on Weight.

Members of the first group, says the bureau, must remember that they do not need as many calories as they once did, or they will take on unwelcome weight. They need a well-rounded diet, but should scale down the amount of high-calorie foods—fats, sweets and starchy foods.

The second group also needs all the essential nutrients, but in forms modified to suit impaired digestion or inability to chew well. For this group, the bureau recommends eating oftener, but less at a time. For example, a glass of milk and a cracker on waking early in the morning, a cup of tea or coffee or broth in the afternoon, and hot milk at bedtime may be taken in addition to three light meals, to help keep up energy during the day and bring better sleep at night.

The diet list should include a great deal of milk, both to drink and cooked in soups and puddings. Foods that are hard to chew should be well chopped up, or in some cases avoided altogether.

Corn Off the List.

Corn, whether on or off the cob, cooked or canned, is one that the elderly should pass by. Lima beans and peas are preferably sieved; tomato juice is better than whole tomatoes with seeds, and squash seeds should be removed.

Fruit juices are suggested rather than the fruit itself, unless it is stewed or baked. Ground meats, soft-cooked eggs, flaked fish, cheese dishes in which the cheese is finely divided, are all, with milk, protein foods which may be used; custards and milk puddings, gelatins, ice cream, and cooked fruits are good desserts.

All kinds of bread are allowable unless they cause digestive discomfort through faulty chewing. Toast and zwiebach are easy to digest. Coffee, tea, malted milk, and cocoa are allowed. Rich sauces and high seasonings and condiments are undesirable.

This Bedspread Will Remake a Room

NOW IS THE TIME to begin crocheting that bedspread you have always planned to make. An oval or a square started now will grow rapidly during vacation days, becoming a full-fledged spread by fall. This kind of needlework is ideal to carry along on summer trips, especially to places where one is going for a quiet rest.

The wedding ring bedspread shown above is one of especial beauty. It appears to special advantage on the bed of simple lines in the above photograph. The approximate size of the spread is 82 by 105 inches. It is especially effective in white over a blue background.

Friendship Held Tie Of Child and Parent

Columbia Professor Calls Duty Relic of Past.

Friendship rather than duty should govern a child's relation to his parents, according to Dr. John Levy, assistant professor of psychiatry at Columbia University, New York.

In a recent address to educators Dr. Levy said the machine age had brought about a different conception of the Fifth Commandment.

"The old conception of the child as the property of its parents, owing love and respect to them as such, irrespective of merit, must perish," Dr. Levy said. "The child is an individual, owing allegiance to himself alone. The home exists solely to provide for the full personal satisfaction of all its members. A far cry, this commonplace of today, from the "duty" of the child to honor his father and his mother.

"In place of honor and forced love, the parents may work for friendship and comradeship. Family ties, based on honest affection and genuine co-operation, yield a true partnership."

Waistline of Skirt Is Raised by Designers

Paris (AP).—Skirts of tailored suits recently shown in Paris aspired to new heights. Many of them crept up several inches over the lower part of the blouse and finished in some trimming detail. If the skirt rose a little higher in front than in back, the style and line were all the better.

1 to 27 Articles Found In Average Handbag

The average woman carries from 1 to 27 odd bits of paper in her handbag, and 100 women together carry 600 pieces of paper.

New Spurt Is Given To Guimpe Dresses

Paris (AP).—Guimpe dresses have been launched again in Paris. One designer made a beige wool guimpe for a brown wool dress, and another combined white organdie with black wool. The organdie guimpe displayed a medieval sleeve of four small puffs and a double ruched collar obviously taken from the same era.

A WASHINGTON MOTHER MAKES A PLEASING DISCOVERY

.... Contains the Health-Giving Elements Required for Her Children

The accompanying article by Mrs. Howell French, 2869-28th St., N. W. which recently appeared in the columns of a local paper, leads us to wonder if there are other anxious mothers in Washington who have not as yet learned that this dairy has made it possible for their children to obtain the benefit of this Health-giving "VITAMIN" in such a pleasing form.

Nearly all children are fond of good, rich milk and the delicious flavor of our Grade "A" Vitamin "D" makes a pleasing drink for children of all ages. Its introduction in Washington has proven very popular and today it is used EXCLUSIVELY in thousands of homes.

From the Washington Herald of February 22, 1936

Paging Vitamin D—In Milk!

By MRS HOWELL FRENCH

My sympathies are always aroused for the young mother who tries so hard to do all that she can for her children and then receives no cooperation in return. Think of all the mothers who forego a much desired fingerwave in order to buy a bottle of cod liver oil for her child. Then what happens? Cries of "I don't want it," "I don't like it," and a struggle which often ends in spilling half of the bottle over a beautiful little frock, or, perhaps, on mother's best tablecloth.

Thanks to a recent discovery, the precious vitamin D is captured with its entire potency and embodied in milk sold by one of our local dairies. Each quart of milk contains the equivalent of one and one-fourth teaspoons cold liver oil, yet flavor unchanged. To prove its worth: In a New York hospital, tests were made by giving eight little ricket patients three teaspoons daily of a nationally-known cod liver oil and eight other patients, in even worse condition, received their cod liver oil only through this special vitamin D milk. In six weeks' time the bones of the milk-fed children were definitely stronger and straighter than those receiving the regular cod liver oil.

The vitamin D milk gives you 400 u.s.p. units of vitamin D per quart of milk. It has been accepted by the Commission on Foods of the American Medical Association.

Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig Chosen State Regent at Final Session.

The District Daughters of the American Revolution — traditional foes of communism—wound up a two-day conference here yesterday in complete official silence on Washington's bitterest "red" controversy —the teaching of Soviet doctrine in public schools.

Failure of the organization to take a definite stand on the proposed repeal of the Federal law that forbids mention of communism in the schools, subject of heated hearings before a House sub-committee for the past several weeks, was made doubly significant by a report of its committee on national defense through patriotic education that held "a knowledge of communism" to be "necessary if it is to be intelligently combatted."

The conference adopted only one resolution on the question of "subversive propaganda" and the teaching of communism. It attacked the spread of such propaganda and recommended the "thorough teaching of the Constitution of the United States and the prinicples laid down in the Declaration of Independence in the public schools of the District."

Officers of the organization refused to amplify the meaning of the resolution or to state what relation it had to the rider. In some quarters the resolution was interpreted to mean that although the Daughters were still as firmly noncommunistic as ever, they were not satisfied with results of the "red rider" and would not strenuously oppose its repeal. Failure to take a definite stand on the question was explained as due to a fear that indorsement of the rider repeal would be misinterpreted as favoring communism.

This interpretation of the Daughters' action when outlined to some of the officers of the organization was not denied.

In the report of the committee on national defense through patriotic education Mrs. John M. Beavers, the chairman, took the same view as did Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University, in a recent address. She quoted Dr. Walsh as saying that "communism is one of the inescapable and major problems in modern civilization and that a knowledge of communism is necessary if it is to be intelligently combatted."

"He knows of no automatic immunity to such a subtle, persistent and creeping fever," Mrs. Beavers continued in her reference to Dr. Walsh. "The best prophylaxis is knowledge of the disease, vigilance against carriers of the infection and vigorous strengthening of the powers of resistance in our own economic and social systems."

New officers of the District organization elected yesterday are Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, State regent; Lillian C. Chenoweth, vice regent; Mrs. T. Temple Hall, chaplain; Mrs. Catherine B. Strong, recording secretary; Mrs. Carl B. Fuller, corresponding secretary; Linda U. Nance, treasurer; Mary E. Black, assistant treasurer; Mrs. Elmer E. Curry, registrar; Mrs. Lee R. Pennington, jr., historian, and Mrs. Samuel B. Woodbridge, librarian.

The Daughters also voted to support the nomination for vice president general of the national association of Mrs. Harry Colfax Grove.

Memory-Laden Relic to Be Moved From No. 13 Forever.

Fannie, a mechanical old girl in a gay red dress, once the sweetheart of Fire Engine Co. No. 13, is to be retired without a pension.

Already the trim hose cart, with her thundering, four-cylinder motor, her chain drive, capable of doing 22-miles-per-hour, and her glittering, hand-tapped bell is idle, awaiting removal to the Fire Department's workshop and garage.

There isn't a stutter in her motor. Her solid tires have bumped over cobblestones to their last fire. Fannie, yesterday's modern, is today's has-been. But no tears will be shed by the fire laddies.

Fannie always has been stationed at 13's firehouse, along the waterfront, within nostril-reach of the fish markets.

Purchased in 1921, she has played a prominent part in fighting practically every fire in the Southwest since. She snorted and clanged to Kann's blaze, to many a lumberyard and dock fire.

Awaiting her in the garage of discarded firefighters are two other famous pieces of equipment—Methuselah, oldest in point of active service, a steam pumper now 22, and Spark Plug, a twin hose cart with venerable defects.

Successor to Fannie, some ultramodern vampire with lines, has not yet arrived, but it has been ordered by Fire Chief Charles E. Schrom.

"She's pretty useless taking up space just now," observed Fire Sergt. C. R. Bassett, acting commander of No. 13.

"I might add the boys haven't any particular love for her. She wasn't fast enough, and sometimes she'd skid on those old solid tires. Still, she never talked back, and that's something in her favor."

Fannie came to No. 13 when there still were horse-drawn engines and carts and ladder wagons.

The horses, veterans at No. 13 recalled yesterday, regarded her with horror and jealousy. Perhaps she showed them their destiny, for soon the last of them, with all the romantic and glamorous fanfare that surrounded their era, were grazing in peaceful pastures.

She was humiliated by them at the time of the Knickerbocker disaster, when she stalled in the heavy snow and the horses got away to a running start, flying hoofs, bells, billows and bellows and all.

"Too bad Fannie isn't a horse," sighed Sergt. Bassett, letting sentiment sit on his chest for a moment.

Lambda Chapter to Hold Founder's Day Banquet

Lambda Chapter of Phi Sigma Fraternity will celebrate Founders Day today by holding a banquet at the Mayflower Hotel. There will also be a tea dance at the chapter house, 1822 Eye street northwest, tomorrow.

Thomas Jackson, of the Washington Club of Phi Sigma Kappa, will act as toastmaster at the banquet. Among those in attedance will be Senators Wagner of New York and Neeley of West Virginia, Representatives McLean of New Jersey and Michener of Michigan. One of the features will be short addresses by the Congressmen and an address by the only living founder of the chapter, Dr. William Thornwall Davis, local eye specialist.

Citizens' Group Joins in Fight On Funds Slash

Brightwood Unit Protests District Cuts, Calls for Senate Hearing.

The Brightwood Citizens Association, meeting last night in Paul Junior High School, added its name to the growing list of citizen bodies protesting against the reduction in the District appropriations by the House of Representatives. The members asked for a hearing in the Senate, feeling the appropriations bill would fare better in that body.

In answer to an inquiry regarding the condition of the closed Brightwood Bank, a letter was read from the Comptroller of the Currency informing members he had not been informed of any efforts to reopen the bank, but that a receiver was proceeding with liquidation of assets. The letter stated every effort was being made to expedite liquidation.

Other business of the association included approval of the Benning site for a Washington airport, providing the Federal Government assumes expenses, and approval of a request for an armory for Naval and Marine Corps Reserves, with the provision that the Federal Government provide the funds.

The group also voted to write a letter to the superintendent of Paul Junior High School offering condolences on the death of Miss Maude Isenberg, a Paul teacher. Miss Isenberg died yesterday as a result of a fall in the school.

Lawson.

Measures calculated to kill the "red rider" affecting teaching of communism in public schools were indorsed last night by the Pleasant Plains Civic Association at a meeting held in Monroe School. A bill to create magistrates' courts in the District of Columbia was opposed. Legalization of horse racing also was disapproved.

Dr. C. W. Tignor, speaking on community health, cited statistics to indicate economic conditions, rather than race, were the basis for high mortality rates. The association directed an inquiry into placement of a large number of colored first offenders in the National Training School for Boys, rather than at Blue Plains.

$1,500 Raised Here To Assist Refugees

More than $1,500 has been raised here in the Hias drive for relief of Polish and German refugees, Dr. Rudolph Kornblith, campaign director, announced yesterday.

Rabbi Abram Simon will solicit donations in a speech today before the Washington Hebrew Congregation, while several other talks before Jewish groups will be made by Dr. Gornblith.

Other participants in the drive include Joseph A. Wilner, the Rev. Louis Novick, Morris Cafrotz, Morris Garfinkle, Isidore Hershfield, I. J. Mazo, E. I. Kaufmann, Benjamin Meiman, John M. Safer, Louis E. Speigler and Charles J. Stein.

Eight Scholarship Contestants To Quit 'Prison' Test Room

When the clock strikes 9 this morning eight aspiring young architects will breathe a sigh of relief—that is, if they haven't fallen sound asleep.

At 9 o'clock yesterday morning the eight youths, two of them students and six former students in the department of architecture at Catholic University, were ushered into a room, deprived of all books and reference material, and given a problem in monumental architecture to solve.

Twenty-four hours was the deadline, and until their work was completed none of the students could leave the room. A guard stationed outside the door prevented any person from entering the room, brought food and drink—including large quantities of black coffee—to the youths when they requested it.

The reason for treating the eight students as jurors in a murder trial was that those were the rules of the competition for the two-year scholarship awarded annually by the American Academy of Rome, for which the youths were contestants. The finished drawings of the students will be collected at 9 o'clock today and submitted to the American Academy of Rome in New York City, where the drawings will be judged along with entries from all over the country.

Two years ago, Robert Weppner, a student of Catholic University, was the national winner; while four years ago, George Nelson, who studied for a short time at the university, won the scholarship.

District Airfield Bill to Be Resubmitted to the House.

Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, yesterday called the attention of the House to the fact that $44,475,707.78 in WPA funds have been allocated for airport projects over the country, but none has been assigned to the National Capital.

Speaking on the relation of airports and national defense, Randolph said:

"In every State, but not at the National Capital, WPA funds are now being used for construction and improvements of airports."

House managers on the Airport Commission bill, withdrawn last Monday in the House, plan to resubmit the report sometime next week. Randolph was chairman of the sub-committee which conducted hearings last year that led to the introduction of the original site commission bill.

Randolph pointed out that $29,964,816.04 is actually being expended on 342 airport projects over the country, while 530 other projects have been approved by the Bureau of Air Commerce and projects amounting to $1,200,000 in addition are ready for submission to the WPA.

California leads the list of States for which WPA funds have been approved on airport projects. Total Federal funds approved by the Bureau of Air Commerce are $6,508,982, of which $2,785,480 is already being expended. New York comes second with an allocation of $3,942,647, most of which is now being spent.

Ohio runs a close third with $3,539,141.32, while New Jersey and Illinois follow with allotments approximating $2,500,000. Maryland's approved allocation is $668,864.45, and Virginia's $413,665.94.

Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, one of the conferees on the District airport bill, cited these WPA allotments without quoting the figures earlier in the week while arguing for Federal participation in District airport construction.

He also charged Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, with responsibility for blocking an effort by the Commerce Department to obtain WPA funds for the National Capital airport.

Glenn Dale Well Deadline Is Set

Construction of the 1,200-foot well which is to supply water for the District children's and adult tuberculosis sanatoria at Glenn Dale, Md., must be completed by May 31, Col. Dan. I. Sultan, engineer commissioner, told the contractor yesterday.

Construction of the well has been delayed for almost three months because drilling tools were lost at the bottom of the shaft at the 800 foot level. Efforts to "fish" it out have not proved successful. The contractor is confronted with the alternative of seeking to complete the present shaft or sinking a new one and having it completed by the end of May or going without any money from the District.

Should the well not be completed by the date fixed, Col. Sultan said arrangements would be made to run a water main from the sanatoria to the District line, where connection would be made with the District water system. The main would cost an estimated $110,000.

Senate Unit Acts On D.C. Bills Today

The Senate District Committee will clear its calendar of District legislation today when it meets at 10 a. m. with the Commissioners and Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman.

As Prettyman's resignation is effective at the end of the day, Chairman King intends to ask for his opinion on all local legislation not previously disposed of by committee.

The Juvenile Court bill is the most important measure awaiting action. Because of expressed opposition, a sub-committee doubtless will be named to hold hearings. Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, is considered the logical choice for chairman.

Other District bills likely to be acted upon are Senator King's proposal to authorize the rewriting of a code of laws for the District, the proposed merger of the Washington and Georgetown Gas Light companies, a bill to increase the penalty for reckless driving, and minor amendments to the District social security act.

District Commissioners Score Compensation Bill

Disapproval of the bill introduced by Representative Vincent L. Palmisano (Democrat), Maryland, providing for appeals to the Federal Workmen's Compensation Commission from decisions of its field agents was expressed by the District Commissioners in a report made yesterday to the Federal Bureau of the Budget.

Previously the Commissioners had approved the bill. They changed their position, they explained, when they discovered that the bill, if enacted, would increase the cost of the law to the District between $6,000 and $10,000 a year.

Children's Hospital Officers Laud Post's Holy Land Exhibit

Showing Opens Tuesday at 7 P. M. at Pythian Temple.

Officials of Children's Hospital yesterday were high in their praise of The Post's sponsorship of the famous Holy Land Exhibit, opening Tuesday evening, March 17, at Pythian Temple, for the benefit of the hospital.

Frederick DeC. Faust, president of the institution that annually provides medical and surgical care and treatment for thousands of child charity cases said, in a letter to the publisher of The Post:

"It is difficult for me to adequately express my gratitude and that of the members of our board of directors for the splendid effort your fine newspaper is making in behalf of Children's Hospital.

"The very nature of the Holy Land Exhibit should make it welcome to Washington, particularly at this season, and I hope the fact that it is being held for the benefit of the hospital will make it doubly welcome to all our citizens.

"I am especially gratified to note that the admission prices of 25 cents and 15 cents for adults and children are low enough to make it possible for everyone to view this inspiring exhibit and at the same time contribute to the welfare of the thousands of children of every creed who receive treatment each year at our hospital."

Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, president of the board of lady visitors of the hospital, expressed the appreciation of her board for "the unexpected help coming to the hospital through so appropriate and beautiful a program to be held during the Lenten season, with an opportunity, through the very moderate admission charges, for everyone to attend at some time during the course of the exhibit."

Dr. John Talbot, orthopedic surgeon on the hospital's staff and secretary of the board of directors, added his praise to the project, and Miss Mattie M. Gibson, superintendent of Children's, said:

"Although I cannot say, at this time, just what the money the hospital will receive from the exhibit will be used for—new equipment, treatment of charity cases in the dispensary, any one of a dozen other worthy uses—I can very definitely say that we need it and that, coming as it does in the form of a pleasant surprise and an unexpected windfall, it is doubly appreciated."

The Holy Land Exhibit, creation of Salvatore and Josef Guaci, who spent 11 years in research and labor on it, occupies floor space 20 feet wide and 40 feet long. It is a reproduction in miniature of the Holy Land, with more than 2,000 ingeniously made figures of people of the times grouped to depict 124 episodes of the Bible.

The exhibit will open at 7 p. m. Tuesday evening, March 17, at Knights of Pythias Temple, 1012 Ninth street northwest. After that date exhibition hours will be daily from 11 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. and from 7 p. m. to 11 p. m.; Sunday, from 1 p. m. to 5:30 p. m. and from 7 p. m. to 11 p. m.

Landscape Artists Are Exhibiting Work

Work of members is being exhibited by the Landscape Club of Washington at the Takoma Park Branch of the Public Library, Fifth and Cedar streets, throughout the month of March.

Among pictures on exhibit are "A Room in the Clark Collection," by Charles Bittinger; "American Landscape," by Roy Clark; "Deserted Village in Italy," by Paul N. Rolando, and canvasses by such well-known Washington artists as Benson B. Moore, Garnet Jex and A. H. O. Rolle.

Fraternity Celebrates Anniversary Tonight

Gamma Eta Gamma, widely known legal fraternity, will celebrate its thirty-fifth anniversary—Founders' Day—with a joint initiation and banquet at the Lee House tonight.

More than 30 law students from Georgetown, George Washington and Catholic universities will be initiated into the active chapters of their respective schools. Honorary initiates will be Senator Joseph O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and Representative Dennis Chavez, of New Mexico.

President Favors Restoration Of Health Items in Supply Bill

With public health items sharply reduced in the 1937 District supply bill that has passed the House, the campaign for adequate appropriations now veers to the Senate. The Washington Post desires that this city have the best public health conveniences in the Nation. This is one of a series of articles designed to show Congress the District's health needs.

By Gerald G. Gross.

President Roosevelt is personally interested in restoration of public health and hospital items, which were eliminated by the Budget Bureau and the House subcommittee on District appropriations, it was learned yesterday.

Several days ago, at a White House press conference, the President implied his dissatisfaction with the $3,000,000 cut in the Federal lump sum appropriation which the Blanton subcommittee made in the District's 1937 supply bill, passed by the House and pending in the Senate.

Not until yesterday, however, was it disclosed on official authority that he is also disturbed by slashes in the Health Department and municipal hospital estimates, which the House adopted upon recommendation of the appropriations subcommittee, headed by Representative Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas.

The corresponding subcommittee in the Senate, of which Senator Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, is chairman, will open hearings on the bill Wednesday provided an adequate hearing room can be found by that time, Thomas said yesterday.

Hearing Is Open.

Having announced that physicians and all others interested in the public health service will be welcome at the hearings, in contrast with the exclusion policy of the Blanton group, Thomas expected large attendance each day and is trying to obtain the largest committee room available.

The Oklahoman's reaffirmation yesterday of plans to conduct fair and complete hearings on the supply bill, together with additional Senatorial comments on the necessity of strengthening the Capital's public healh establishment, sent hopes soaring for restoration of appropriations eliminated in the House.

Senator Carter Glass, chairman of the appropriation committee, gave assurance of his concern with control of tuberculosis and other communicable diseases and adequate facilities for hospitalization of the indigent and tubersulars.

"I am deeply interested in efforts of The Washington Post to secure adequate health appropriations for the District," said Senator Marcus A. Coolidge, of Massachusetts, who is a member of the Thomas subcommittee.

Two decades ago, while mayor of Fitchburg, Mass., Coolidge served as chairman of the board of Burbank Hospital, an institution supported in part by municipal funds.

Among other members of the Senate Appropriations Committee who have expressed similar views since the emasculated District bill was passed by the House are O'Mahney, Adams, Russell and Copeland. Senator Capper, of Kansas, former officio member of the Thomas subcommittee, also has committed himself in favor of ample funds for maintenance of the Health Department, Gallinger Hospital, Tuberculosis Hospital and the Children's Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Glenn Dale, Md.

Encouraged by the turn of events, Dr. Sterling Ruffin yesterday called a meeting of the civic committee campaigning for the public health cause. It will be held at 815 p. m. Monday at headquarters of the District Medical Society, of which Dr. Ruffin is president.

Organizations Added.

Two organizations have been added to the committee since its formation February 16 at a mass meeting in Central High School auditorium. They are the Federation of Business Men's Associations, which is represented by Dr. J. J. Greeves, and the D. C. Life Underwriters Association, represented by Dwight J. Scott.

Organized to petition for restoration of Health Department and hospital estimates which were curtailed by the Budget Bureau, the committee now is confronted by a 1937 supply bill, which, as passed by the House, provides $23,800 less for the Health Department than the figure recommended by the Budget Bureau.

Ballou Urges Playgrounds For Schools

Proposes Purchases Near Established Institutions in 5-Year Plan.

Cites Inspection Which Shows 50 Sq. Ft. Needed by Each Pupil.

Purchase of properties adjacent to some of the older schools in the District for use as playground facilities as part of the new five-year school building program was proposed yesterday by Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou before the finance committee of the Board of Education.

As proof of the need of such playground facilities, Dr. Ballou cited an investigation of 139 schools by the Public Health Service in 1928, revealing that 70 per cent of the schools lacked adequate ground for physical training purposes.

Space Requirements Short.

Fifty square feet per pupil was the minimum standard of adequacy set by the Health Service. Of 123 grade schools inspected, 88 had less than 50 square feet per pupil, 24 of these having less than 20 square feet. Of the 7 junior high schools visited 4 fell below the norm, and of the 9 high schools, 6 were found wanting.

Play spaces would not be purchased in every instance, Dr. Ballou pointed out. Schools which, it is thought, will have to be abandoned in a few years, would not be improved, but all the funds available would be directed toward the acquisition of properties adjoining schools that unquestionably will be used for many more years."

Dr. Ballou's suggestion was approved by the Finance Committee as were four other recommendations of his:

First, that the existing policy of constructing an assembly-hall gymnasium in every school with 16 rooms or more be continued.

Second, that provision should be made for rooms in elementary schools for occupational classes as contemplated in the vocational school bill now before Congress.

Third, that classrooms should be provided in elementary schools for open-air rooms purposes for anemic children.

Fourth, that a program calling for the replacement of antiquated school buildings be adopted.

Would Combine Schools.

Under Dr. Ballou's plan, a single replacement project by which two or three of the older schools would be abandoned and a new, larger school set up in their place, would be proposed for each of the nine school divisions. In the first division, for example, the Grant, Corcoran and Weightman schools would be abandoned and a new 24-room grade school erected. Such a program, Dr. Ballou intimated, would mean the abandonment of from 12 to 15 buildings in the next five years.

The five suggestions approved by the Finance Committee are to serve as a "basic policy" for the presentation of the elementary school needs of the city by 1942. Preliminary estimates indicate that from 300 to 400 additional rooms will be needed

Porch Rail Breaks; Woman Falls 20 Feet

Miss Alma Hutchinson, 30, of 67 Randolph place northwest, was in a serious condition at Emergency Hospital last night after she fell from a second floor porch of her home while shaking a rug. The railing gave way, hurtling her to the pavement 20 feet below.

At Emergency Hospital she was treated for a compound fracture of the elbow, broken wrist, lacerated lip and cuts and bruises over her entire body.

Sergt. Lamp Promoted To Post of Lieutenant

Promotion of Sergt. Marchel Lamp to lieutenant in the District Fire Department was approved by the Commissioners yesterday. Lamp will assume his new rank on Monday, succeeding Leut. E. J. Carroll, retired. Private D. H. Brookbank was made a sergeant to take Lamp's place and Keith S. Pixley was appointed as a private.

Egyptian Wants to Work for New Deal

From far-off Egypt, U. S. Marshal John J. Murphy received a letter the other day from "Dr. Hafez Zaky" who wants Murphy to get him a job when he (Zaky) soon returns to the U. S.

A few weeks ago, Ollie Martirr thought he would write an ad and not a letter to get a job. He inserted this inexpensive ad in The Post's "Situations Wanted" Columns and secured a job the same morning his ad appeared:

HOUSEWORK, kitchen help; needs any work; references. Martin, NO. 1054.

"Situations Wanted" Ads in The Post cost only one-half of The Post's regular want ad rates. For instance, a 3-line ad costs only 27 cents. If you're looking for a job, take advantage of this modest rate to reach the thousands of employers who read The Post every morning.

Dr. J. R. Sizoo Announces Two Sermon Topics

Dr. W. H. Spicer To Sail Friday

Dr. William H. Spicer, son of the Rev. and Mrs. W. A. Spicer, 32 Elm avenue Takoma Park, will sail next Friday for Mollendo, Peru, to become a medical missionary for his denomination, the Seventh-Day Adventist. He will have charge of the hospital operated by the Adventists in Chulumani, Bolivia, a community in which many descendants of the Incas live.

Dr. Spicer, whose father was general president of the denomination from 1922 to 1933, was born in 1891 in London. As a youth he attended the Washington Missionary College. He served in the Army during the World War, and later attended the University of Montepelier, France. After his work there he came to the United States and became a teacher in the New York City high school. The next step was four years in the College of Medical Evangelists in Loma Linda, Calif., from which he was graduated in 1930. He married Miss Verna Hill, a graduate nurse, and located at Cucamonga, Calif., where he has been engaged in private practice. The couple has a 3-year-old son, Edward Manfred.

'Substance' Lesson Set Tomorrow

"Substance" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Proverbs 3:9: "Honour the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thine increase."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Verily I say unto you, inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." (Matthew 25:40.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The rich in spirit help the poor in one grand brotherhood, all having the same Principle, or rather; and blessed is that man who seeth his brother's need and supplieth it, seeking his own in another's good."

5 Services Arranged By Salvation Army

Washington's five Salvation Army Corps will conduct services tomorrow, according to this schedule:

Washington No. 1 Corps, 606 E street northwest, Adjt. Henry Wilkins in charge, 11 a. m. and 8 p. m., Maj. Charles Walker, speaker.

Fifteenth Street Christian Church. The Rev. Leslie L. Bowers, pastor Dr. J. T. T. Hundley, president of Lynchburg College, will be guest pastor tomorrow morning. The choir will sing special music at the 8 p. m. service. The pastor will preach on "The Cue of the Crowd."

Columbia Heights Christian Church. The Rev. A. P. Wilson, pastor, will preach at 11 a. m. on "Christ the Rock of Ages." Continuing his talks on "Truth in Story," Mr. Wilson will talk tomorrow night on "Ten Young Maidens."

Douglas Freeman Speaks Tomorrow

Douglas Southall Freeman, LL.D., of Richmond, Va., who is editor of the Pulitzer prize-winning biography, "R. E. Lee," will deliver the address at the choral evensong service at 4 p. m. tomorrow in the great choir of Washington Cathedral.

Since Dr. Freeman spoke from the same pulpit a year ago at memorial services for General Lee, he has been elected a member of the Cathedral Council. He is the first of a group of distinguished laymen who have been invited by the Bishop of Washington, the Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., to present messages on subjects of national and international importance.

The State flag of South Dakota will be presented to the Cathedral at the beginning of the service. Sen. William J. Bulow, of South Dakota, will present the emblem.

Canon Anson Phelps Stokes will deliver the sermon at the service of Holy Communion at 11 a. m. in the great choir. The Rev. Malsolm S. Taylor, director of evangelism for the National Commission on Evangelism of the Episcopal Church, will deliver Lenten address in the Chapel of St. Mary following the evensong service Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday next week.

Gaithersburg Church To Mark Anniversary

The congregation of Grace Methodist Church, Gaithersburg, Md., will celebrate the thirtieth anniversary of the erection of its present church March 30 to April 12.

Several former ministers of the church have been invited to take part in special programs and services, according to the Rev. Frank A. Tyler, pastor.

Sermon in French.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 13.—The pattern for the Washington ball club of 1936 will be revealed to the public gaze for the first time tomorrow afternoon when the Nats take the field against the Boston Red Sox in their opening exhibition game here.

One month lacking a day from the time Manager Bucky Harris submits his batting order to the umpire in charge tomorrow, it will be the same Washington team that will be trotting out on the diamond at Griffith Stadium against the Yankees in the opening battle of the pennant race.

Batting Order.

It is the outfit that Bucky Harris has determined upon as his strongest possible front after three weeks in training here. He may say for the benefit of players whose names are missing from the line-up that there are jobs open on his ball club, but he is nevertheless definitely committed to a line-up and batting order that will be:

Buddy Lewis, third base.
Buddy Myer, second base.
Jake Powell, center field.
Cecil Travis, shortstop.
Carl Reynolds, right field.
Joe Kuhel, first base.
Cliff Bolton, catcher.

Notably missing from this arrangement is Dee Miles, the fleet young outfielder who was supposed to make a strong bid for the right field post, and Johnny Stone, the regular right fielder of last season whose chief crime apparently is that he bats left-handed.

With an entire infield comprised of left-handed hitters, including Catcher Cliff Bolton, Harris is eager to balance the team with an exclusively right-handed hitting outfield. Thus the veteran Carl Reynolds gets the call for the right field job, at least the first call in deference to his well-known spring hitting proclivities.

Other Newcomers.

The other two newcomers to the line-up—Jesse Hill and Buddy Lewis—already are fixtures, Harris declares. Rating Hill as the ideal lead-off man, Harris welcomes the former Yankee's speed and fly-catching ability to the club and visions him as an acceptable hitter.

Young Lewis has implanted himself solidly in the esteem of Harris during the training siege here. Already rated as an acceptable fielder, the Chattanooga graduate is now displaying an excellent throwing arm. He is rapidly eradicating the last remaining doubts as to his fitness for the post by smacking the ball solidly in practice with a batting stroke that stamps him as something of a stylist.

Orlando and environs are expected to turn out to the record-breaking number of 3,000 for the invasion of the Red Sox and their high-priced stars tomorrow. President Will Harridge will throw out the first ball, bands will toot and the chamber of commerce is promoting the game as a gala occasion.

Appleton Last.

Manager Harris, in an effort to instill the confidence in his young ball club that a victory over the highly touted Red Sox would bring, will start Buck Newsom on the mound. Newsom, his No. 1 pitcher, will be followed after three innings by Ed Linke, the No. 2 right-hander on the squad. Old Pete Appleton will pitch the last three innings in his first test with the Nats under fire.

From Sarasota, the Red Sox camp, come reports that Owner Tom Yawkey will view the game here to watch in action in Boston uniforms for the first time his newly acquired stars, Jimmy Foxx, Roger Cramer and Eric McNair. The Boston club will send Pitchers Rube Walberg and Fritz Oestermuller, a pair of southpaws, and Right-hander Jack Wilson to the mound against the Nats.

Derringer Enters Suit for Divorce

By the Associated Press.

Tampa, Fla., March 13.—Paul Derringer, Cincinnati Reds pitcher, has filed suit for divorce against Vera M. Derringer, charging his wife with "violent and ungovernable temper."

The petition was filed in circuit court December 14.

The Derringers came into court today for a hearing on Mrs. Derringer's petition for temporary alimony, costs and attorneys fees, but the hearing was postponed until next Tuesday.

Larry McPhail, manager of the Reds who accompanied the pitcher to court, said the suit has so hampered Derringer's training schedule he would suspend the player if the hearing was much prolonged.

Coyle of N. B. C. Off To Cover Nats' Camp

Bill Coyle, N. B. C. sports commentator, will leave tonight for the Nats' training camp at Orlando, Fla., where he will combine business with pleasure in covering the Nationals' training activities.

Coyle's copy will be broadcast from two local stations and will be heard on four programs. Gordon Hittenmark's Timekeeper, Uncle Bud Ward's Childrens' Hour and Coyle's own Midnight Frolic will be the WRC programs, which have promised to relay Bill's copy to the listeners.

Also WMAL's Sports Parade will serve as another medium, when and if, the sports writers who will be batting for Coyle, decided to forget themselves and talk shop.

Snavely Is Appointed Cornell's Grid Coach

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 13.—Cornell University athletic authorities tonight officially confirmed the appointment of Carl G. Snavely, of the University of North Carolina, as new head coach of football, replacing "Gloomy Gil" Dobie.

Snavely, head coach at North Carolina for the last two seasons, will take charge at Ithaca, N. Y., this spring under a three-year contract, understood to call for an annual salary of $8,500.

Negotiations with Snavely were closed early this week, but formal announcement was withheld, pending the acceptance of his resignation at North Carolina, where his contract had one year more to run.

The Tarheels were reluctant to let Snavely go, it was understood, and gave him his release tonight at a meeting of athletic authorities at Chapel Hill, N. C.

In his two years at North Carolina, Snavely's varsity pupils lost only two games, one to Tennessee in 1934 and the other to Duke late last season, in the South's most stunning upset of the campaign. Despite this setback North Carolina was ranked among the Nation's "first ten" college teams.

Snavely was Cornell's selection for the job of reviving Big Red football fortunes after an intensive six-week search by James Lynah, the new athletic director. Applications from nearly 100 coaches were considered and several dozen interviewed.

Due to report at Ithaca, N. Y., on April 1 and take charge of spring practice, scheduled a week later, Snavely faces the task of organizing comparatively green material for the toughest schedule any Cornell varsity team has had since prewar days.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Orlando, Fla., March 13.

JOHNNY STONE, who is, among other things, the handsomest guy on the Washington ball club in uniform or out, may be excused for wondering what a guy has to do to make good in this league. It has all the earmarks of a fine run-around that the Mulberry, Tenn., lad is getting down here in the Nats' training camp.

POVICH.

In the plans of Manager Bucky Harris and Owner Clark Griffith for their 1936 Washington ball club, both announced and unannounced, the name of Stone figures about as importantly as the Locarno Pact. Theirs is an attitude of "Oh, yes, and then there's Stone," whenever the discussion turns to the club's outfielders. For some peculiar reason, and I mean it's peculiar, Johnny Stone is getting a grand go-by from the Washington bosses.

On the subject of Carl Reynolds and Dee Miles, the other candidates for the rightfield job, Harris and Griffith hold forth with great enthusiasm. But Stone they appear to take for granted as one of those fellows who should not be underrated, nor overrated, either. He's a pretty good ball player, apparently, in the estimation of Harris and Griffith, but that, strangely, seems to let him out.

So, Stone, a .315 hitter last season, the third best socker on the club, possessor of the best throwing arm in its outfield, a clever fly chaser, tolerably swift on the bases, and able to hit a ball farther than any regular on the club, finds himself relegated among the reserves as the team prepares to go to bat in the 1936 pennant race.

Guys like Jesse Hill, who batted .296 but wasn't good enough to beat the aging Earl Combs out of a regular outfield job with the Yankees; and like 19-year-old Buddy Lewis, who in his only eight games as a big leaguer last fall was a dismal flop at third base, are handed regular jobs on the Washington team by Bucky Harris, with no questions asked. Yet Stone, a proven big leaguer, whose conduct is above reproach, is shooed to the bench, bereft of the job that he held for two years.

No flash in the pan is this Stone. He stepped almost directly into the outfield of the Detroit Tigers from Marysville College, in Tennessee, in 1928 and batted .354. That .315 average he amassed last year was no freak, either. It was the same figure for which he hit in 1934 for the Nats after they thought enough of him to bring him from the Tigers in an even swap for Goose Goslin.

He's got a lifetime batting average of .307 for his eight years in the big leagues, and at 30 there is no appreciable diminution in the speed that enabled him to steal 13 bases for the Tigers in 1931. There were only two rightfielders in the American League who outhit him in 1935—Julius Solters, of the Browns, and Wally Moses, of the Athletics. The fellows who have the inside track on this job with the Nats now are Carl Reynolds, who slugged away at a .270 pace, and Miles, who murdered the ball for about .280.

All of which seems to indicate that there is something screwy with the reasoning of Harris and Griffith down here. Stone at least is entitled to think so. The guy, 'twould seem, has a kick coming, and if it were directed literally at the hind quarters of Harris and Griffith, it would not, in the opinion of this department, be out of order.

In Short—

Orlando next spring will be the scene of a baseball school under the direction of Joe Stripp, native Orlandoan and veteran third baseman of the Dodgers . . . by permitting Stripp the use of Tinker Field as the school's headquarters, Clark Griffith will have first call on all talent developed among the 150 pupils expected to attend . . . on the "faculty," in addition to Stripp, will be Nick Altrock and Pitchers Ed Linke and Jimmy DeShong, of the Nats . . . DeShong, the best-dressed member of the Washington club, apologized profusely today for appearing in the same striped trousers and knit jacket which he brought out once before this week . . . Dick Lanahan's slightly sore pitching arm and Dee Miles' painful stiff neck are the chief items on Trainer Mike Martin's casualty list . . . Roberto Estaliela exchanged his Travis model bat for a Goslin model today and promptly smacked a ball into the leftfield fence on the fly . . . Clark Griffith declares the Cuban not only has power but a better batting stroke than any rookie he ever saw come out of the minor leagues.

Wynne Sees Nationals' Infield As Best in League This Season

(This is another in a series of stories from the Nationals' training camp at Orlando, Fla., written by Huck Wynne, Washington sandlotter whose trial is being financed by The Washington Post.)

By Huck Wynne.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 13.—I doubt if there is going to be a better infield in the league this year than Washington's from a fielding standpoint.

Even with Bucky Harris trying an experiment at two positions, the Nats look as if they'll have a swell fielding infield.

At first base, Joe Kuhel looks like he has recovered his old form that always struck me as the best in the league. Nobody here seems to be able to explain Kuhel's fielding slump last season, but now he looks like the same old Kuhel who makes all those fancy catches and saves at least one infielder an error in every game.

I don't have to bring up the subject of Buddy Myer's fielding. Everybody knows about that. If Buddy isn't the best second baseman in the league at fielding his position, he is close to it.

If Cecil Travis doesn't turn out to be the sensation of the league at shortstop everybody here is going to be badly mistaken. He looks as if he played the position all his life. He gets over the ground far better than he did at third base and looks perfectly natural doing it. He's got a great pair of hands, too.

But the real surprise is Buddy Lewis. For a 19-year-old fellow, he's the most polished player I ever saw. Of course, he can't be mentioned with Ossie Bluege, but who can? But this Lewis is something like a cat out there. He gets a quick break to either side and in practice he's been making those one-handed stops and throws on bunts that only the great third basemen can make.

Whatever happens to the Nats this season, I don't think they'll be able to blame it on infield errors.

Measure, If Reported, to Be in Revised Form, Says Palmisana.

THE opposition to legalization of horse racing in Washington got in its licks before the Judiciary Committee of the House District Committee yesterday, with Andrew J. (Cy) Cummings, himself fetlock deep in the game in Maryland, voicing dire predictions for the Capital if the sport is made lawful here.

"The District would be broke in six months," predicted Cummings, secretary of the Laurel, Md., plant, forecasting the future of Washington if racing is legalized here.

Following the attacks on the Norton bill, which would permit Walter E. O'Hara, operator of the Narragansett track in Rhode Island, to build a similar plant on the site of the old Benning track, Chairman Palmisano announced that if the subcommittee reports the bill to the full committee it will be in a drastically revised form.

Revenue Features.

Palmisano said the changes particularly would deal with the revenue features of the bill. The measure would be changed to follow the existing Maryland law under which the tracks are licensed at $6,000 per day. There also would be placed a definite limit on the number of days racing allowed each, a restriction which is not imposed by the Norton bill in its present form.

Cummings, who headed a number of witneesses opposing the legalization of the sport in Washington, dealt at length on some of the technicalities of race track operation, pointing out that under the present revenue features of the Norton measure the moneys passed through the mutuel machines would quickly revert to the track. In its present form, the measure calls for a 10 per cent "cut" on all money passed through the mutuels, plus the "breakage," which Cummings stated amounts to 10.8 per cent.

100 Days' Sport Nearby.

Cummings stated further that he did not see the need of a racing plant in Washington as residents of the District have easy access to more than 100 days of the sport on Maryland tracks, most of which can be reached within one hour.

C. M. Clark, a former newspaperman who appeared as a representative of the public, argued against the building of a race track here. "There are eight tracks in Maryland," he stated, and also told of the track at Charles Town, W. Va., which can be reached by train for a very low round-trip fare, which includes admission to the track.

George E. Sullivan, chairman of the law and legislation committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, testified his organization was opposed to passage of the Norton bill "on public policy, not on religious or moral grounds."

Representing the International Reform Federation, Henry N. Pringle, assistant superintendent, attacked the measure on the grounds that it would legalize and promote a vice.

Pringle presented many facts and figures, stating that in one year about $185,000,000 was gambled through the mutuels at 106 legal dog and horse racing tracks. Of this amount, Pringle stated, the States received approximately $6,000,000, including tax on admissions.

"Racing is the greatest racket in America today," declared Pringle, quoting from a magazine article in which business men were quoted as saying department store sales had fallen off 35 per cent, relief de-

Wisconsin Averts Big Ten Expulsion

By the Associated Press.

Madison, Wis., March 13.—The University of Wisconsin faculty took action today to prevent expulsion of the school from the Western Conference (Big Ten) at the end of the present school year.

The faculty group adopted a resolution assuring the Big Ten faculty committee that control of athletics was again vested in the Wisconsin faculty.

This assurance was expected to satisfy demands of the conference faculty committee which, at a meeting in Chicago a month ago, warned university authorities the school would be suspended from the Big Ten, effective July 1, if assurance were not given meanwhile that control of athletics had been returned to the faculty.

A plan devised by a joint committee of eight regents and 13 faculty members was approved at a faculty conference today. It provides for reorganization of the university athletic council by dropping three members, the president of the university, the business manager and the president of the board of regents who had previously sat as members with non-voting powers.

Greenberg Ready For Compromise

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 13.—Like the expectant youngster on Christmas Eve, Hank Greenberg, the Detroit Tiger's slugging first baseman, is awaiting developments from club officials on his offer to accept a "compromise contract" and thus end his holdout war.

Greenberg, taking things easy in his Bronx home today, was in a "declining mood."

He declined to say (1) how much the Tigers had offered him, (2) how much he wants, (3) what compromise salary he suggested.

"The last contract they sent to me early this week, and which was marked 'final' was unsatisfactory," the big fellow said.

Tow Decisions La Page in Chicago

Alexandria Boy Gains as Bout Progresses; Foe Is Staggered.

By Dave Herman.

A Staff Correspondent.

CHICAGO, Ill., March 13.—Bob Tow, gangling Alexandria, Va., heavyweight, continued his sensational fighting tonight to score a unanimous decision over Louie La Page, of Paterson, N. J., in the semiwind-up of a nall-star heavyweight program at the Chicago Stadium.

The bout went six rounds and Tow proved himself complete master of the situation throughout, although baffled by the very short New Jersey boy in the first few rounds.

It was Tow's third straight victory at the Stadium and greatly added to his prestige in the "white hope" elimination tournament.

Decision Is Booed.

Oddly enough, the decision met with a chorus of boos, since Tow outweighed his smaller rival by 18 pounds. Tow scaled 202 and La Page 184.

In the first round, La Page, extremely short in comparison to the towering Tow, proved elusive and no hard blows were landed. Tow began to find the range in the next round and shook Louie with long overhand rights to the jaw.

Bovello Is Host To Champions

Anthony P. Bovello, whose Bovello Plumbers last night won The Washington Post-A. A. U. basketball championship, 145-pound class, was host at a banquet given his team last night in the east lounge of the Ambassador Hotel. The following were guests: Jackie Bovello, Skeets Edelin, Gay Edelin, Jack Breen, W. L. and Mrs. Courtney, William Morgal, Gus George, John Billings, Joe Bertolini, Winfree Johnson, of the A. A. U.; Harry Fiddesup, Mrs. Marjorie Bullard, Dorothy Fairall, Mr. and Mrs. George Oertell, Latimer Barkley, Coach Mike Raedy, Ralph Raedy and Clarence Henderson.

Fredericksburg Girls Win, Claim State Title

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., March 13.—Ths girls basketball team of Fredericksburg High defeated the South Boston High lassies 28 to 13 here tonight and claimed the girls high school State championship.

South Boston, champions of Southern Virginia and undefeated until tonight, found themselves entirely outclassed by the Fredericksburgers as the locals won their twenty-ninth straight victory.

Revolta Ousted in Best Ball Tourney Upset; Smith Loses

By the United Press.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., March 13. Johnny Revolta, P. G. A. champ who yesterday teamed with Henry Picard to capture the $2,000 international four-ball tournament, today was tumbled out of the first round of the national amateur-professional best ball meet.

Teamed this time with Allen Ellis, of Boston, Revolta lost, 3 and 2, to Byron Nelson, Rosemont, and Bob Archibald, Jacksonville.

First round of play today saw favorites generally march through unscathed, although two upsets occurred.

Jug McSpadden, of Boston, and Johnny Spencer, of Jacksonville, who yesterday led qualifiers, barely nosed out a 2-to-1 victory over Horton Smith, of Chicago, and Jack Ryerson, Cooperstown, N. Y.

Jimmy Hines, of Garden City, N. Y., depending champion, however, went down to defeat. Teamed with Mark Stuart, New York amateur, he was eliminated, 3 and 2, by sharp-shooting Orville White, St. Louis, and Scottie Beverly, Thomasville, Ga.

The only other major upset was the defeat of the Denny Shute-Howard Tryon combination, 3 and 2, by Ky Laffoon, Chicago, and Al Ulmer.

Track Aces Vie In '36 Finale Tonight

Cunningham Given Edge Over Venzke, Mangan in Garden Race.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 13.—It's the last mile of the indoor track season for Gene Venzke, Joe Mangan and Glenn Cunningham in the Knights of Columbus meet in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night.

They will toe the mark for the Columbian mile in the climax clash of the most spectacular rivalry in middle distance racing history. They have battled repeatedly this winter to blanket finishes, the kind the average track fan expects only of the sprinters.

Mangan and Venzke, or both, have capitalized on their powerful finishing "kicks" to nip Cunningham, invincible last year, at the tape in most of the big fixtures this campaign, but circumstances may give the great Kansan a chance for revenge tomorrow night.

Both Mangan and Venzke have been laid low by illness in recent weeks and Cunningham may have an edge on both in the matter of physical condition. Moreover, the Kansan has picked the K. of C. meet for some of his finest performances in the past. He set the present indoor world record of 4:08.4 in the Columbian two years ago.

Sharing interest with the milers' tussle will be the Casey 600 (yards) in which Eddie O'Brien, Syracuse's sensational quarter-miler, opposes Chuck Hornbostel, Indiana product who now is taking post-graduate work at Harvard. O'Brien has set new indoor standards for 500 yards and 600 meters this season and will be aiming at the 600-yard record of 1:11.3.

Golfer's 230-Yard Shot Hits Caddy in Stomach

Covington, Va., March 13 (AP).—Alvin Dollins, a leading amateur golfer in this section, made his first drive of the season the other day and the ball landed solidly against his caddy about 230 yards away.

"It's peculiar," said Dollins, "that with the whole course for the ball to land in, it had to come to rest on the caddy's stomach.

Negro Stops Foe's Early K. O. Bid

Pummels Briton After Taking Stiff Punches Without Damage.

Decision Is Unanimous; 12,980 Pay $37,712 to See Fight.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 13.—With fine disregard for his rival's vaunted punch or the implied jinx of Friday the 13th, John Henry Lewis, Arizona Negro, successfully defended the world's light heavyweight championship tonight by decisively outpointing Jock McAvoy, British challenger, in a 15-round match at Madison Square Garden.

Lewis, the aggressor from start to finish, spiked McAvoy's heaviest weapons with the speed and shiftiness of his attack. The champion outboxed, outsmarted and, particularly at close range, clearly outpunched the challenger, hailed as Britain's best pugilistic product since the war and a potential threat to World Champion James J. Braddock.

The decisiveness of McAvoy's defeat was entirely unexpected, however, and a shock to experts who had seen him flash convincing form in his few previous American fights, including a one-round knockout of Eddie (Babe) Risko, American middleweight champion, in a non-title bout in the Garden last December.

Victor in 11 Rounds.

On the Associated Press scorecard, Lewis won 11 rounds, with 3 credited to McAvoy and 1 even.

The decision of Referee Arthur Donovan and the two judges was unanimous. Nevertheless, a good share of the crowd, including 12,980 cash customers who contributed to gate receipts of $37,712, obviously was strongly partisan in the Briton's favor and roundly booed the verdict.

Lewis had a 4-pound pull in weights, scaling 172½ to McAvoy's 168¼.

There were no knockdowns at any stage of the fight that was alternately savagely fought and one-sided. Lewis, in superb condition and able to sustain his swift, aggressive pace from start to finish, quickly took command and piled up a convincing margin on points before the half-way mark was reached.

McAvoy tried hard to break down the Negro's defense and score a knockout early in the bout. In the first and fourth rounds, the lat-

Miss Bam Wins at Tropical Park as Favorites Are Beaten

Wins Length Victory in Sprint

Seven Pines and Maxine F. Runs Out; Mutuel Returns $18.40.

By the Associated Press.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., March 13.—The fifth race, a 6-furlong dash for 3-year-old fillies that served as the chief magnet here today, saw the two standout favorites in a field of five finishing out of the money. The purse went to A. G. Tarn's Miss Bam under Johnny Longden in a race that was run to order for the stretch-running daughter of Blazes.

The $18.40 for $2 hazard registered by a length. C. V. Whitney's Miss Otis, longest priced filly in the race, earned the place by a length and a half over Mrs. C. Cran'e Ste. Louise. The time was 1:11 4-5.

Brings Up Rear.

J. E. Widener's Seven Pines, favorite at 6 to 5, was fourth. Maxine F, closing at slightly better than 2 to 1, brought up the rear after being bothered in the first few strides. Because of the two favorites running unplaced, the show payoffs assumed freakish proportions. The smallest show price was 2 to 1.

Miss Otis cut out a fast pace, with Seven Pines daylight behind and Ste. Louise heading the others. Longden brought the slow starting Miss Bam around the field at the last turn and the combination wore down Miss Otis well inside the final furlong. Seven Pines stopped badly, losing third money to Ste. Louise by a half length.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NIPANTUCK, $11.40, $4.60, $5.00; CAMINO REAL, $2.60, $2.40; GUILDER, $8.20.

NIPANTUCK, hustled into a contending position at once, responded strongly when put to a hard drive, stole through on the inside of the leaders entering the homestretch, then finished determinedly to get up right at the end. He pulled up lame. CAMINO REAL, rushed hard to set the early pace, met repeated efforts from GUILDER and held on with good courage for the closing test. GUILDER, well up throughout, held on gamely to outlast DORIS B.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs; claiming. Purse, $700. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 2:53. Off at 2:56½. Start good (chute). Won driving; place same. Winner, Mrs. M. Eckman's b. m. | CHIRAC | (Arcaro) | 112 | 6 | 2 | 7h | 9¹ | 10 | 10 | 14.20 |

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGH TORQUE, $47.20, $17.60, $7.10; DIXIE PRINCESS, $3.50, $2.60; VANDA CERULEA, $3.80.

HIGH TORQUE was sent up fast to gain a forward position in the opening quarter mile, bettered his position readily when shaken up, and finishing gamely, drew out nicely after displacing VANDA CERULEA. DIXIE PRINCESS worked her way up on the outside, joined the leaders approaching the homestretch and held on courageously under a hard drive. VANDA CERULEA broke fast and clear, had good speed while setting the pace, but weakened in the closing furlong.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs; claiming. Purse, $700. For 3-year-olds. Went to post at 3:27. Off at 3:35½. Start poor. Won easily; place driving. Winner, Mrs. William E. Martin's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHE KNOWS, $11.00, $7.10, $5.30; DAME QUICKLY, $10.40, $6.20; INFLAME, $4.60.

SHE KNOWS sprinted clear after going a half mile, saved ground all the way and was easily best of her opposition. DAME QUICKLY was under stout urging while holding a forward position, and continued gamely when the final test came. INFLAME improved his position on the outside, lost considerable ground entering the homestretch, but held on well to outfinish TRUJILLO.

FOURTH RACE—Four furlongs; claiming. Purse, $700. For 2-year-old fillies. Went to post at 4:04. Off at 4:09½. Start good. Won driving; place same. Winner Ken Kling's br. f. (2), by Hi-Jack—Maliza. Trained by Robert H. Shannon. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:48.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JOAN ASBESTOS, $6.60, $3.80, $3.20; SUNCRAX, $20.20, $8.60; CATHY P., $11.30.

JOAN ASBESTOS, favored by improved handling and away nicely, took command directly after the start, met strong contention from CATHY P. in the opening three furlongs, rallied strongly to vigorous pressure while saving ground and barely lasted long enough to withstand SUNCRAX. Latter raced strongly on the outside of the leaders and fought it out determinedly when the closing test came. CATHY P. was a stout factor all during the running and held on willingly while finishing second to the first two.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs; allowances. Cross and Dunn purse, $800. For 3-year-olds, fillies. Went to post at 4:42. Off at 4:45. Start good (chute). Won driving; place same. Winner, A. G. Tarn's b. f. (3), by Blazes—Bambi. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:11 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS BAM, $18.40, $6.60, $6.00; MISS OTIS, $10.00, $6.80; STE. LOUISE, $7.60.

MISS BAM, favored by the fast early pace, swung to the outside when catching up with her company, rallied strongly when engaging the leaders, then finished full of run to wear MISS OTIS down during the stretch drive. MISS OTIS had much speed while setting the pace, shook off SEVEN PINES, but could not withstand the winner's rush. STE. LOUISE went in her best form and held on gamely under a hard drive.

SIXTH RACE—One mile; claiming. Purse, $700. For 3-year-olds. Went to post at 5:17. Off at 5:19. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Winner, Mrs. N. E. Doyle's ch. f. (3), by Dunlin—Emerald Star. Trained by W. Durnan. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:38 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRIGHT EMERALD, $15.60, $7.00, $4.30; SWEET GUINEA, $4.10, $2.90; JOHN TIO, $4.20.

BRIGHT EMERALD outran her field to the first turn, went along smoothly until reaching the final turn, was shaken up mildly, drew out and finished with much speed in reserve. SWEET GUINEA, a slow beginner, settled in her stride after going five furlongs, improved her position while saving ground, then closed with good speed. JOHN TIO made a strong bid nearing the homestretch and held on with good energy.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile; claiming. Purse, $700. For 3-year-olds. Went to post at 5:50. Off at 5:51½. Start poor. Won easily; place driving. Winner, Mrs. M. C. Breen's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MOVE FASTER, $9.20, $4.90, $3.50; BLESSED EVENT, $7.10, $4.90; HIGHEST POINT, $5.70.

MOVE FASTER, handling his weight nicely, sprinted into a clear lead going to the first turn was steadied intelligently while setting a fast pace and held BLESSED EVENT safe when shaken up in the last quarter mile. BLESSED EVENT, showing improvement, worked his way up gradually, but was unable to menace seriously during the closing drive. HIGHEST POINT raced prominently all the way and held on willingly under severe pressure.

Racing Bill Foes Attack Measure

mands had been increased and other evils resulted from the legalization of racing in Rhode Island.

The Right Rev. William S. Chase, of the International Reform Bureau, directed the opposition of the measure. He also briefly registered his objections to the legalization of the sport here.

Thursday those in favor of the measure appeared before the committee. Among those favoring the bill were Frank J. Coleman, secretary of the Central Labor Union; Charles E. Sands, of the Hotel, Restaurant and Bartenders Association; William C. Murphy, of the Central Labor Union, and Herbert Rivers, secretary of the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor.

A number of business and civic organizations also indorsed the bill Thursday.

Blue Banner II Takes

Blackhawks And Typos Beaten

Thrilling Clashes Mark End of Tournament; Awards Given.

The crowd watched the Sandy Spring, Md., feminine flingers crush the United Typewriter sextet, 20 to 14, to win the girls' championship in the first game and then sat back to see the Bovello Plumbers stagger through to win the 145-pound class men's title, 20 to 19, from the Twin Oak Blackhawks, 1935 champions.

No two fitter battles could have polished off the tourney, the most successful the event has seen in years. The girls' final, played in a rather tense atmosphere, brought undefeated teams together, but resulted in the end of a 17-game winning streak on the part of the Typists.

Awards Presented.

Miss Maude Parker of the Department of Playgrounds presented the Sandy Spring team with the handsome Washington Post-District A. A. U. plaque and gold medals to members of the team; silver medals were presented the Typists. Winfree Johnson of the A. A. U. presented the 145-pound class title plaque to Anthony P. Bovello, sponsor of the champions, gold medals to the team and silver medals to the runners-up.

Taking a 13-8 lead in the first half, the Maryland misses maintained the lead during the second half despite a determined stand on the part of the Washington City champions. The suburban champs were well supported on the bleachers. In some measure, the 1935 girls' championship was retained by the Sandy Springers, for five of their players were on the Sherwood A. C. sextet which won the title last year.

The 145-pound final furnished a thriller surpassed by few games of the tourney. The Bovello squad took a 13-5 lead in the first half and stretched it to 18-11 in the second half before the Blackhawks hit the stride of a desperate rally which fell 1 point short of sending the game into an extra period.

Blackhawks Rally.

With four minutes to play, the Blackhawks were trailing, 20 to 15, when Everett Cross, versatile Twin Oak tosser, sank a basket which started off the comeback. His brother Chester came back with another, but then missed two foul shots in a row which proved to be the costly shots which might have meant the old ball game. Chester came through with another basket, however, with one minute to play for 20-19, but the Plumbers' freezing game and some ineffectual shooting by the Blackhawks served to prevent the Twin Oaks from making up the 1-point difference.

John Billings, Post All-High center last year, was the high scorer, with 11 points, for the Plumbers. Chester Cross' 7 points led the Blackhawks.

Lewis Defeats Jock McAvoy

ter his best of the entire match, Jock punished Lewis with body blows and jarred the champion with left hooks to the head. The titleholder weathered these spurts and countered with a two-fisted attack that soon wore down McAvoy's resistance and had the Britisher hanging on throughout the last half of the fight.

Once satisfied he could "take" Jock's stiffest wallops, without serious damage, Lewis cut loose and gave his challenger an artistic shellacking. Jabbing, feinting and punching with dazzling speed, the champion consistently forced McAvoy to cover and punished him with two-fisted effectiveness.

Challenger Groggy.

The Negro's attack reached its peak in the eighth and ninth rounds. With McAvoy obviously tiring under his rival's brisk attack and giving ground, Lewis lashed Jock unmercifully, kept a stream of blood flowing from the Briton's nose and had the challenger groggy. McAvoy, covering desperately, nearly went down once from a series of overhand, hammer-like rights to the head, but managed to keep his feet by holding desperately to John Henry.

McAvoy carried off a shade in the sixth and thirteenth rounds, as well as the fourth, besides getting an even break in the opener. His rallies were brief, however, and Lewis had a wide margin otherwise.

The challenger complained of a damaged right hand after the fight, saying he hurt it in the first few rounds. The fist was badly swollen, but pending more detailed examination there was no evidence it had been broken.

Old Line Bows To Wisconsin Ring Team

Beaten, 5½-2½, Before 9,000; Gormley and Lombardo Win.

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Wis., March 13.—Wisconsin's boxing team took five out of eight bouts and earned a draw in one to defeat Maryland's ring team here tonight, 5½ to 2½, before a capacity crowd of 9,000.

Tom Birmingham, Maryland bantamweight, drew with James Walsh. Art Walsh, Badger flyweight, opened the match with a technical knockout over Charles Gebhart. Walsh took the first two rounds by clear margins and rocked Gebhart with rights to the jaw in the third before Coach Jack Harmony tossed in the towel.

Birmingham took the first round by a wide margin with stinging counter punches to the jaw. Walsh rallied in the third after an even second round to gain a close draw. The decision was unpopular with the crowd.

125-pound class—James Walsh (Wis.) and Tom Birminsham, drew.
135-pound class—George Stupar (Wis.) stopped Morty Schwartz in third (1:22).
155-pound class—Vito Schiro (Wis.) defeated Blair Smith.
Heavyweight—John Gormley (Maryland) defeated Vern Woodward.
165-pound class—Mike Lombardo (Maryland) defeated Charles Zynda.

Rinaldi, En Route to A. A. U. Tourney, Drills in Chicago

By Dave Herman.
A Staff Correspondent.

CHICAGO, Ill., March 13.—En route to Denver, where they will participate in the annual National A. A. U. championship scramble, the Rinaldi Tailors stopped over in this city for a few hours today and spent the time brushing up on offensive tactics which they hope will give them at least a high ranking—if not the title.

The double pivot, a valuable scoring play to which Coach Dave Keppel attributes the majority of the 47 victories won thus far, was stressed during the drill, with Hal Kiesel, of George Washington University, and Bernie Lieb, Catholic University, handling the ball. Both are all-District selections and on their ability to successfully use this play hinges the Tailors' championship aspirations.

Use Tallest Men.

All nine players were used extensively throughout the hour and a half drill, but it is apparent that Keppel intends to use the tallest five of the squad in the opening game to combat the notorious height of mid-Western opponents. Rinaldis, incidentally, drew a bye for the first round and will not swing into action until Monday night.

Kiesel will start at center, with Lieb and Bill Noonan, a former George Washington star, paired at forwards; Ollie Tipton and Carroll Shore, guards. Rotund Sammy Hook, Bobby Lucas, Cliff Keyser and "Pickles" Walker will be held in reserve. Keppel believes this group possesses all of the earmarks of a championship combination and is confident that if the boys play their normal game it will be sufficient to capture the national trophy.

All of the group, including Manager Jim Hennessey, are in excellent spirits and as enthusiastic about the tournament as a bunch of Sunday school youngsters on a picnic. Tonight we are speeding toward the Rocky Mountains, scheduled to arrive in Denver Sunday morning at 7 o'clock.

Keppel has no immediate plans, but a long snooze is certain for all hands. A light workout probably will be held either in the afternoon or night and the squad will be sent back to bed early for a good night's rest in preparation for its tourney debut.

Knowles Has Flu, Won't Fight Here; Better Man Found

MR. GOLDILOCKS AHEARN, who arranges the programs of punch at Turner's Arena, was in a dither yesterday as Carl Knowles, signed to fight John Anderson in one of the eight-round co-features of next Monday night's card, pulled out of the bout.

"Mr. Knowles regrets," or words to that effect, read a telegram from Carl. "Mr. Knowles regrets that he is in bed with influenza and will be unable to do any fisticuffing for you Monday night. I hope you're not angry and love and kisses."

After dithering about a bit, Mr. Goldilocks emerged with a substitute in the person of Bob Turner, who is, perhaps, an even better fighter than Knowles. Turner has defeated Red Bruce, Hookey Jackson, Larry Wagner (conqueror of Middleweight Champion Babe Risko), Anson Green and Joe Lipps, among others. He is a knockout artist, having won most of his bouts by putting the snore on his opposition.

Miss Hemphill Victor Over Mrs. Vare

Upsets Rival, 3 and 2, to Win Golf Tourney at Belleair.

By the Associated Press.

BELLEAIR, Fla., March 13.—Kathryn Hemphill, soft-spoken Columbia, S. C., girl, turned in her second major upset of the week today as she defeated Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, six times national champion, to wi nthe annual Belleair Women's Golf Tournament.

Her three-and-two finals victory over Mrs. Vare, of Philadelphia, followed her second round defeat of the veteran Maureen Orcutt Crews, of Miami.

Par golf on the out nine gave the Carolina titleholder a 2-up lead over Mrs. Vare. She took advantage of a short approach by Mrs. Vare on the first hole to gain a lead neve rrelinquished and matched the national champion's par on the second, birdie on the third and par on the fourth.

Mrs. Vare Gets a 6.

On No. 5, Mrs. Vare three-putted for a 6, while Miss Hemphill canned her second for par 5 and a two-hole edge.

A sparkling birdie 3 on the eighth gave the national champion her first hole, but Miss Hemphill promptly went 2 up again on nine when Mrs. Vare smacked her second out of bounds and needed a one over par 6.

Sensing victory, the stalwart, suntanned Carolinian cut loose with two long wood shots on the tenth and pitched dead to the pin for a certain birdie 4. Mrs. Vare carded par 5.

Halve Two Holes.

They halved eleven and twelve in par figures, but Miss Hemphill came through with another birdie 4 to win the fourteenth. Mrs. Vare was short with her third, a chip, and followed by chipping too boldly. The ball struck the back of the cup and bounded 2 feet away, and Mrs. Vare missed the putt. Miss Hemphill was on in 3 and rolled in her putt.

Miss Hemphill's long putt on the short fifteenth knocked Mrs. Vare's ball to within 3 feet of the cup and the Philadelphia player won her second and last hole by sinking the short putt for a birdie 2.

Dormie 3, Miss Hemphill played safely for a par 6 on the long sixteenth and Mrs. Vare's putt for a birdie failed.

Sparrows Beat Flashes In Game in Alexandria

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., March 13.—The Sparrows, held to the short end of a 9-to-8 count at half-time, ran roughshod over the defending champion Flashes here tonight to win the first game of a 3-out-of-5 series playoff for the city junior basketball title. The escort was 23 to 13.

A. A. U. Boxers Vie in Finals Tonight

Olympic A. C. Needs Only to Win Two Bouts to Clinch Crown.

THE Olympic Athletic Club, winner of all local team trophies since the legalization of boxing here, will enter the finals of the District A. A. U. championship tournament at Turner's Arena tonight a heavy favorite.

The Olympics, with four men in the finals, need to win only one individual title to clinch at least a draw and two wins will make it impossible to beat them for the team award.

The Jewish Community Center and Washington Boys Club teams, with three qualified for the finals, are the only teams within striking distance of the defending title-holders.

Tonight's card, which is scheduled to start at 8:30, is studded with outstanding contests. Angelo Pappas and Joe Petro promise a merry war in the 112-pound class. The featherweight division contest will be between Billy Tardugno and Lou Gevinson, sensational Olympic Club performer, who should afford some of the most interesting action of the night.

Leon Shub, former lightweight champion, will face rough Mike Morton, Merrick 135-pounder, in that weight class.

Representative Fred Hartley, one of the sponsors of the bill legalizing boxing in the District, will donate a trophy to the best performer in the tournament. Each of tonight's fights will consist of five two-minute rounds.

(Probable winners shown in capital letters.)

112-pound class—ANGELO PAPPAS (W. B. C.) vs. Joe Petro (M. P. B. C.).
118-pound class—Preston Drew (unattached) vs. GEORGE PICKERAL (O. A. C.).
126-pound class—LOU GEVINSON (O. A. C.) vs. Billy Tardugno (J. C. C.).
135-pound class—LEON SHUB (J. C. C.) vs. Mike Morton (Merrick).
147-pound class—George Abrams (W. B. C.) vs. STEVE MAMAKOS (W. B. C.).
160-pound class—CREIGHTON ALLEN (N. E. B. C.) vs. Ralph Smith (O. A. C.).
175-pound class—JIMMY KING (O. A. C.) vs. Frank Nebel (Wash. Canoe Club).

Charts Bowling Team Wins Geodetic Survey

In a nip-and-tuck battle, the Charts team defeated the Hy-Tides yesterday afternoon to gain the championship of the Coast and Geodetic Survey Bowling League, at Luck Strike alleys. The Charts quintet took the decision by a slim margin of five pins, gained in a roll-off, after both teams finished the five-game stretch deadlocked with a total pinfall of 2,584 apiece.

Frank "Merriwell" Erskine, captain of the winning aggregation, turned the tide of victory with a double-header strike in his final game and striking again in the roll-off. Capt. Frank Borden made a gallant but futile effort to give Hy-Tides the pennant with 137 in the final game.

Northern Virginians Form Loop Thursday

The Northern Virginia Baseball League will organize for the coming season next Thursday at a meeting to be held in The Washington Post Building.

Managers of teams in the league last season are asked to be present. Representatives of clubs seeking admission also may attend. The league again will operate under The Washington Post Sandlot Association.

West Md. Boxer Bows In First Tourney Bout

State College, Pa., March 13 (AP).—Capt. Russell Criswell, of Penn State, two-time 115-pound champion of the Eastern Intercollegiate Boxing Association, whipped Bob Bennett, of Western Maryland, in the opening fight of the thirteenth annual tournament tonight.

Bennett worried Criswell with a hard straight left, but Criswell, who beat Bennett in the finals last year, wore him down with punches in the last two rounds.

New Government League.

An unlimited baseball league for Government players unable to make the first or seond teams of their departments is being formed by the Sports Center Shop. Departments wishing to enter notify Mike Sklar at the Sports Center or call Metropolitan 6444. A meeting to organize the league will be held Tuesday, March 17, at 7:30 p. m. at the Sports Center, Eighth and D streets northwest. The following teams are especially urged to compete: G. P. O., G. A. O., Treasury, Procurement Division, Disbursing Division, Census, Investigation, Shipping Board, Commerce, Interior and Labor.

'Kid' Carson Dies.

Toronto, March 13 (AP).—Jackson H. (Kid) Carson, 36, one-time holder of the featherweight and lightweight boxing championships of Canada, died yesterday in a hospital from pneumonia, it became known today.

Washington Y Meets Baltimore.

The Washington Y. M. C. A. swimming team will open its dual series with the Baltimore Y. M. C. A. paddlers in the Central Y pool tonight at 6 p. m.

Out Fishin' . . . .

By Jack Hawley.

The Angler's Prayer.

Oh God, let us be true to our desire
To give our share to whom we hire,
To pay our portion of gas and oil
To him who rides us o'er your soil,
To never borrow another's lures,
To equip ourselves like epicures,
To share our cost of bait and ice,
To play our fish—'tis worth the price,
To treat our captain with respect,
To shun him who uses illegal net,
To remember each day to do a kind deed,
To never waste sea food that others might need,
To caution a few to lessen their "cackle,"
To take this sport on the end of light tackle,
To first give our leader enough ready cash
To pay for the trip, including our hash.

J. H.

DURING the long cold winter most of us have had sport in the preparation and anticipation of another fishing season and, if it is the equal of 1935, there will be no complaint. All claim it to have been the best in a decade.

Anglers who look ahead and provide themselves with a good permanent fishing scrapbook, not a small or cheap one, will be surprised to find how fast it grows. It is best to enter complete data as to each item, especially pictures. Divide the book into at least three sections, your personal trips, catches, pictures, gear used and notes. Remember, facts and dates on poor trips are quite as useful as those on your star performances.

Most of you probably know where the writer found the title of this column, so lets start out right by getting into the spirit of the thing by using Edgar Guest's poem, "Out Fishin'" for the first page of your scrapbook. Copy on request. Reliving the thrilling battle with big fish is entertainment in the telling with pictures. It shortens the interval between winter and spring, the season of anticipation.

Before planning your proposed fishing trips this season many important factors must be taken into consideration: You must know something about our fresh and salt waters; when and where to go; laws of Virginia and Maryland; kind of gear and its cost, boat hire, approximate cost per person per trip for salt water fishing from Delaware south along the Atlantic coast to Albemarle Sound, Oregon Inlet, Pamlico Sound to Core Banks, North Carolina (fishing starts in North Carolina next month), the Chesapeake Bay, James, York, Rappahannock, Potomac, Patuxent and the many other rivers available for game fish and the many species contained therein.

Knowing these things will make you a better fisherman, better in every way, better tempered, better in knowledge because there is so little yet known and so much to learn about the denizens of fresh and salt water. All the fraternity of anglers will want to know.

There is no other activity in sports quite equals fishing, either in total number of participants annually or results obtained from funds expended for the regaining and/or preserving a healthy body. What other sport can boast of 6,000,000 men and women annually purchasing licenses for competition in fresh water alone and another 6,000,000 fishing in salt water where no license is required? Think of it, a total of 12,000,000 people wetting a line.

Fishing leads all sports in Washington by a big majority. The angling fraternity here can boast of the largest number per capita of any city in the world. No other city is so centrally located for all kinds of fishing grounds which can be reached in a comparatively short drive from one's office. A sport? Ask the first active man you meet on the street. Statisticians can go to work in the sports department and the writer expects to hear them say, "Its just a fish story by Mencke."

Don't be afraid to experiment and be sure to use proper equipment. If you could only hear half of the tales your correspondent has heard of glorious fishing opportunities lost from lack of proper equipment and of faulty equipment destroyed by attempting its use under wrong circumstances, you would appreciate the value of doing your fishing correctly with light tackle. Fishing for us is and should be a sport, not annihilation with strong arms and "horse 'em in" on a 60-pound test line attached to a reel seated upon a lifeless rod or miniature phone pole.

Even the croaker (hardhead) is sporty on light tackle and because of his abundance lets try and "play" him this season. The quality of his flesh deserves his right to escape your skill, if he can.

Step into any sporting goods store and you will find old and young anglers looking over the new lines of tackle, just arrived. The youngster will be purchasing a hand line, hooks and sinkers in an attempt to retrieve a certain catfish that was lost last fall and believed to be in the same old hole above Joe Fletcher's. The elders looking over wet and dry flies, tapered and level fly lines, reels, rods, etc. The gleam in the eye tells a story repeated year after year, anticipation is over, actuality begins April 1 in Maryland, Virginia follows 15 days later—trout fishing—until June 30

Western Tankmen Win.

Int. Harvester Sales Increase 57% in 1935

Profit Covers Preferred Dividend First Time Since 1930.

Chicago, March 13.—International Harvester's annual report for 1935, issued today over the signature of President Sydney G. McAllister, shows further improvement in the company's business last year and says that the trade outlook for 1936 in the United States and Canada is regarded by the management as favorable. Total sales for 1935 were $217,563,447.31, which is 57 per cent more than 1934, but 35 per cent less than 1929, the highest previous year.

Net profits were $19,618,238.03, or 6.2 per cent of the total capital invested in the business, and the report notes that this is the first year since 1930 that net earnings have sufficed to cover the preferred dividend. Net operating income yielded $11,878,048.71 of the year's profits, and the remainder of $7,740,189.32 came from interest on receivables, time sales and investments and from miscellaneous earnings.

"The larger volume of business," President McAllister says, "resulted from increased farm income, accumulated need for replacement of farm implements and general improvement in business, together with the introduction of new machines and models and increasing demand for the International motor truck line."

Capital Transit Seeks To Acquire W. R. T.

The Capital Transit Co. has applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to acquire the Washington Rapid Transit Co. Both are subsidiaries of North American Co.

The acquisition would be brought about by payment of $212,370 in cash for the 21,235 shares of Washington Rapid Transit stock and the assumption of a 6 per cent promissory note for $327,253 held by the North American Co.

Nor. Pac. Places Order For 12 Locomotives

New York, March 13.—Announcement was made today that Northern Pacific Railway Co. has ordered 12 locomotives from the American Locomotive Co. at a cost of approximately $2,000,000.

Sheffield Steel Corporation, a subsidiary of the American Rolling Mill Co., has received an order for the Fort Peck, Mont., tunnel which will take between 9,500 and 10,000 tons of reinforced steel.

Bituminous Output.

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended March 7 as approximately 8,600,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week: 1935, 8,712,000 tons; 1934, 8,355,000 tons.

Candy and Shoes Lead Chain Stores

Boston, Mass., March 13.—January sales by chain store systems were 4½ per cent larger than the year previous, a gain somewhat less than that made by our department stores. The largest gains compared with a year ago were made by the candy and shoe groups.

Cotton Futures Off 3 to 11 Points

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was easier today under scattered liquidation closing 6 to 9 points net lower. Sales, 29 contracts. Bleachable spot, nominal: March closed 9.45; May, 9.90; July, 9.54; September, 9.42; October, 9.16.

Auto Output Gain Foreseen for Week

Detroit, March 13 (AP).—Ward's automotive reports estimated today that automobile production for the week will be 93,216 passenger cars and trucks compared with 88,217 units last week. It predicted that "production will show a further gain next week."

Cram's reports placed the current week's output at 90,660 units, against 84,705 last week and 97,090 in the comparable week of 1935. Cram's added that "a small increase is looked for next week."

Outdoor Advertising.

New York, March 13 (AP).—Burnett W. Robbins, president of General Outdoor Advertising Co., reports at the annual stockholders' meeting today that business booked by the company for the six months beginning March 1 exceeds by $641,000 the volume for the same period last year.

Wins Insurance Honor.

J. G. Hopkins, Washington representative of the Lincoln National Life Insurance Co., has been named among the first 20 of his company's more than 1,500 sales representatives in February paid production.

Food Cost Drop Saves Buyers Million a Day

Sharp Decline Restores Family Income to 1933 Ratio.

Minneapolis, March 13.—The sharp drop in food prices in January and early February means a saving of $1,000,000 a day to American consumers, and has practically restored the average family's income to its 1933 relationship with living costs, according to a two-year family buying power study issued today by Northwestern National Life Insurance Co. of Minneapolis.

A month's supply of food for the average family of four, which cost them $38.63 at peak December prices, could be bought in February for $37.66, the report states. Eggs, fats and oils, meats, cereals and baking products registered the greatest price declines.

An equivalent supply of food cost $30 at average price levels of 1933; up to the end of 1935, living costs had increased a little faster than income since 1933, the company's index shows, but the wide lag of income behind outgoes which existed at the end of 1934 has now been practically made up.

Living quarters which cost $24 per month at average housing rates of 1933 had advanced to $27.46 by the final quarter of 1935, and indicated further increases in 1936, due to the Nation-wide housing scarcity and the gradual recovery in real estate values.

Clothing for which the average family could budget $20 a month in 1933 would cost them $22.04 in the final quarter of 1935, with negligible change in January.

Cities Service Sells Richfield Oil Holdings

New York, March 13 (AP).—Attorneys for the Cities Service Co. revealed today that agreement has been reached on the transfer of the Cities Service holdings in the Richfield Oil Co. of California to the Rio Grande Oil Co., owned by Consolidated Oil Corporation, in exchange for a 50 per cent interest in Rio Grande's capital stock and "other considerations."

The transaction, which has not yet been completed by the actual transfer of securities, is regarded as an important step in reorganization proceedings of Richfield.

Sugar Raised Again; Now 4.85c a Pound

New York, March 13 (AP).—Two large refiners today advanced the price of refined sugar 10 points to 4.85 cents a pound wholesale. The lift, the seconds within three days, was posted by American Sugar Refining Co. and Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Co.

An extremely firm spot market, and a steady trickle of orders from the retail trade, following the large tonnages booked last week, were among other factors behind the increase, it was said in trade circles.

Stocks Continue Decline Under Pressure of War Situation; Bonds Down; Dollars Up.

New York, March 13.—Markets for securities at home and abroad labored under apprehension and traders showed a marked preference to withdraw for a while, but weakness at no time became great enough to cause grave alarm. On the whole it could be said that the markets showed courage and calmness under the strain of the war threats. Turnover in stocks was smaller at around 2,750,000 shares, with prices down 1 to 3 points at the close. Bonds were weak in all departments. May wheat closed ¾ higher at 101⅛ cents a bushel.

Stocks were struck down at the start, although moderately, by foreign sales, and then the local talent on the floor and the professionals operating outside the stock exchange seemed to take charge of the position. The market lacked rallying power throughout, but it was distressingly weak on only two short occasions: around the noon hour and again two hours later. Neither try for a bad break dislodged a great deal of long stock and the market was therefore allowed to drift, with short covering sufficient at times to permit some stocks to recover a portion of their losses.

Stocks to lose 2 to 5 points were numerous. Among them were Allied Chemical, Telephone, Deere, Case, du Pont, Eastman, Fairbanks, Gulf Steel, Manville, Owens Glass, Paramine, United American Bosch, Brown Shoe and Borg Warner. Among the preferred issues to lose 3 points or more were Blumenthal, Colorado & Southern first, Fairbanks, Kresge, McCrory and Midland Steel. Federal Mining preferred dropped another 10 points, but the common was steadier.

U. S. Smelting ran up 2 points in spite of a weak metal stock market. Rails fell away 1 to 2 points and chemicals were worse off than that. Chrysler retreated 3 points and General Motors fell under 60. Steel was firm up to the last hour, when it gave up more than a point. Oils were slightly lower, although Jersey rose a point on large volume.

Sources of Selling.

Where most of the stock selling came from was, as usual, on a decline, a matter of guesswork. Several of the larger brokerage houses reported no great amount of trading on the part of their clients. Such activity as took place was mostly on the selling side, partly because accounts were fairly well padded with long stock and could not be expanded to take advantage of the lower prices unless more cash were put up.

The average trader would prefer to wait to see a halt to the decline and the outlines of a peace settlement that would relieve war tension in Europe before taking a positive stand. Doubtless, some of the recent crop of small traders has been harvested with the usual losses, but no general liquidating movement seems yet to have got under way. That would leave most of the selling to professional account—mostly shorts—and to foreign interests.

What the shorts are doing will not be known for certain, but the consensus among brokers and other Wall Street people is that foreign selling does not amount to a great deal. Some reported trading for account about evenly divided between buying and selling today, and it is well known that th scare abroad has started a new flight of capital to this side. Some houses found sales orders both from London and Paris at the market opening, followed by moderate buying.

Direct information from the other side shows a feeling in London, at least, that the markets have fully discounted all the bad news justified by the actual situation, and more than one broker with foreign clients says that no selling orders of consequence have been executed since last Monday. Foreign sales, the matter may be summed up, touched off a decline in the stock market which in any case was overdue from the long and uninterrupted advance.

Foreign Markets Weaken.

Weakness in stocks and bonds was not confined to the New York market. Foreign markets also were weak and in London the decline was regarded as reflecting the true gravity of the situation, after earlier attempts to put a smiling face on the matter of Germany's threat to the peace of the world. Dollars consequently advanced against all European rates and the Far Easterns as well. Sterling was down a half a cent and francs were sloppy in spite of exchange control operations. Most foreign bonds also reflected the bearishness now prevailing on the continent.

In the Far East the outlook was no brighter than it was anywhere else. Yen continued their fall and Japanese bonds were steadily offered for sale. Their weakness flows from the fear, first, of a war with Russia, and second, of an expansive inflationary movement necessary to maintain the heavy military budget, now that the old regime inclined toward a stable currency has gone out of power.

Here and There.

Detailed publication was given a month ago to the I. T. & T. refunding plan involving a $35,000,000 convertible issue. The subject to be taken up at a special meeting on May 13 is for Postal write-off. Just why the I. T. & T. refunding should spread over the press at this interim date is another of those newspaper oddities . . . Tips from Boston brought to light the plans for Oklahoma Natural Gas financing, published yesterday afternoon . . . Any one interested in securities and who is keen for a bit of worry as a pastime has plenty of room for exercise. A few of the things to worry about just now are: German war, Japanese war, gold bloc currency devaluation, dollar devaluation, higher taxation in a multitude of forms, higher margin requirements, stiffer bank reserve requirements, gold imports, gold exports, larger silver purchases, smaller silver purchases, break-up of holding companies, forcing of holding companies, forcing of railroad bankruptcies, greenback circulation, further nationalization of banks, pensions for every voter with a good record, re-election of the brain trusters.

Coal Bin Sweepings.

Make your own comment on this one: The Stock Exchange, which recently struck from its trading list the Burns Brothers stocks, buys coal from the company; just to show no hard feelings, so to speak.

Freight Traffic Continues Gain Over Last Year

Total of 634,828 Cars in Week Is Rise of 8.1 Per Cent.

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended March 7 totaled 634,828 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of 47,638 cars, or 8.1 per cent above the corresponding week in 1935 and an increase of 20,708 cars, or 3.4 per cent above the corresponding week in 1934.

Loading of revenue freight for the week of March 7 was a decrease of 38,295 cars, or 5.7 per cent below the preceding week, largely due to a reduction in the movement of coal.

Loading of merchandise less than carload lot freight totaled 159,335 cars, an increase of 1,388 cars above the preceding week, but a reduction of 571 cars below the corresponding week in 1935 and 7,091 cars below the same week in 1934.

Coal loading amounted to 133,198 cars, a decrease of 41,957 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 3,258 cars above the corresponding week in 1935. It was, however, a decrease of 19,645 cars below the same week in 1934.

Grain Shipments Higher.

Grain and grain products loading totaled 36,971 cars, an increase of 294 cars above the preceding week, 9,996 cars above the corresponding week in 1935 and 7,204 cars above the same week in 1934. In the Western districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week ended March 7, totaled 22,300 cars, an increase of 148 cars above the preceding week this year and an increase of 5,417 cars above the same week in 1935.

Live stock loading amounted to 11,166 cars, an increase of 593 cars above the preceding week, but a decrease of 518 cars below the same week in 1935 and 825 cars below the same week in 1934. In the Western district alone, loading of live stock for the week ended March 7, totaled 8,341 cars, an increase of 553 cars above the preceding week this year, but a decrease of 670 cars below the same week in 1935.

Ore loading amounted to 6,468 cars, an increase of 594 cars above the preceding week, 2,037 cars above the corresponding week in 1935 and 3,075 cars above the corresponding week in 1934.

Coke loading amounted to 8,206 cars, a decrease of 2,107 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 1,456 cars above the same week in 1935. It was, however, a decrease of 1,888 cars below the same week in 1934.

All districts reported increases in the number of cars loaded with revenue freight, compared with the corresponding week in 1935. All districts, except the Eastern and Allegheny, also reported increases compared with the corresponding week in 1934.

Hudson Motor Sales Set 6-Year Record

New York, March 13.—Sales of Hudsons and Terraplanes for the first week in March broke all records for the corresponding week since 1930. This is the second sales mark of six years standing that Hudson has shattered in the past two weeks, as February sales were also ahead of any February since 1930.

W. R. Tracy, vice president in charge of sales of the Hudson Motor Car Co., states that in accordance with his predictions made in midwinter, the spring selling season has arrived earlier than for several years.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London.—The stock market was unsettled yesterday due to the international political situation, with practically no buyers. Prices were lowered all around with transatlantic and industrial shares closing fractionally above the lows of the day. The market closed unsettled.

Paris.—Lower prices prevailed in the bourse in absence of a solution to the international situation. Bank shares and rentes declined and international shares were unsteady. The closing tone was heavy.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures were higher early, on firmness in Winnipeg and strength in Canadian and Australian offers. The market eased later on American selling and disappointing milling demand. Cotton continued dull with irregular price movements, reflecting continental buying and trade demand for near months.

$18,000,000 Cash Reported By Paramount

Film Company's Business at Highest Level Since 1931.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 13.—Substantial improvement in the financial position of the Paramount Pictures Corporation was reported today by John E. Otterson, president.

Mr. Otterson said the company's current cash and equivalent amounted to around $18,000,000, one of the highest levels for this item in the history of the organization.

Film rentals since the first of the year, it was stated, have been running at the rate of $1,000,000 a week, or the best since 1931. Profits of the corporation's theaters were said to be between 20 and 30 per cent above those of the same quarter last year.

President Otterson estimated 1935 net earnings would amount to more than $3,000,000. Operations in the final quarter of the year, it was added, were well on the profitable side of the ledger.

Reductions in the cost of producing pictures at present, it was pointed out, were around 33⅓ per cent, compared with previous outlays. Due to the high cost of pictures made last year, Mr. Otterson indicated that it was not yet known exactly what reserve could be set up for amortization.

He expressed optimism over the outlook for the corporation and believed that, if nothing untoward happens, the company should be well in the black by the end of 1936.

The Paramount head said motion-picture companies do not believe television is an immediate menace to the industry.

Banking Group Seeks Control Of Big Utility

Transfer of Oklahoma Gas Is Now Being Negotiated.

New York, March 13.—Negotiations looking toward the transfer of control of the Oklahoma Natural Gas Co. from the Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co. to Stone & Webster, Inc., and an allied group of financial institutions, are nearing completion.

The company dominates the natural gas industry in Oklahoma, operating 1,700 miles of pipe lines and distributing gas in the major communities of Oklahoma. The properties form a complete system for gathering, transmission and distribution of gas.

A few details must be attended to before the deal between the Central Hanover and Stone & Webster, Inc., and associates can be completed. It is known that representatives of Stone & Webster left here yesterday on a hurried plane trip to Oklahoma. The time element is important because the deal is contingent upon a refunding of the mortgage debt and May 1 is the last day for calling the 6 per cent bonds.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Foreign exchanges were lower in terms of the dollar yesterday, reflecting continued nervousness over the European diplomatic crisis.

In New York the French spot franc was off .09⅛ of a cent to 6.63½ cents. Foreign exchange traders said the market showed "apparent signs of official support." The discount on franc 90-day futures around midday stood at around .23⅛ of a cent, compared with .21½ of a cent on Thursday.

In Paris the dollar closed earlier at a rate which was the equivalent of 6.633 cents to the franc.

The pound sterling at $4.97 in New York showed a loss of ⅛ of a cent. This compared with the earlier dollar closing in London at $4.97 to the pound.

40TH THE HECHT CO. ANNIVERSARY SALE

Introduces another store service feature:

A plan that marks another step forward for The Hecht Company in Department Store Service to Washington . . . a plan that will be enthusiastically received by thousands of Washingtonians as a means of paying out of earnings instead of savings.

62 departments offer 40th ANNIVERSARY specials..the 'HECO' plan allows 6 months to pay!

Simple? Simple as ABC! You may take as long as six months to pay for your account. The small carrying charge for this service will be cancelled if you decide to pay the full amount within ninety days.

This revolutionary new plan follows the same lines as laid down by concerns selling automobiles, homes and insurance. The Hecht Company has re-developed the idea to apply to your purchases of every day needs.

We repeat . . . THE "HECO" SIX MONTHS BUDGET PLAN is sound and wise and will be accepted enthusiastically by thrifty Washingtonians . . . USE IT!

The HECO 6 months budget plan

COME to the Credit office on the second floor and procure a stamp book as illustrated. Then make your purchases and hand your stamp book to the salesperson. Stamps will be detached to cover your purchase and immediate delivery will be arranged. Of course, this plan also applies to purchases made in our Basement Store and Bargain Annex.

HERE'S THE PLAN OF PAYMENT

|---|---|
| $4 monthly pays up to $25 worth! | $20 monthly pays up to $120 worth! |
| $10 monthly pays up to $60 worth! | $30 monthly pays up to $180 worth! |
| $15 monthly pays up to $90 worth! | $40 monthly pays up to $240 worth! |

JUST LIKE BUYING A HOME

The F. H. A. heads the lists of sponsors of home buying on the divided payment plan. If it were not for this government leadership, and similar action on the part of reputable firms, 80% of you who do own your own homes, would still be renting!

JUST LIKE BUYING A CAR

And . . . it was just such a system of financing that made it possible for us to enjoy the luxury of automobiles . . . and incidentally made it possible for the automotive business to grow to one of the world's leading industries.

JUST LIKE BUYING INSURANCE

INSURANCE . . . another mighty and humanitarian business has made it possible for us to protect our families, our business and homes by means of systematically arranged budgeting to suit our convenience.
